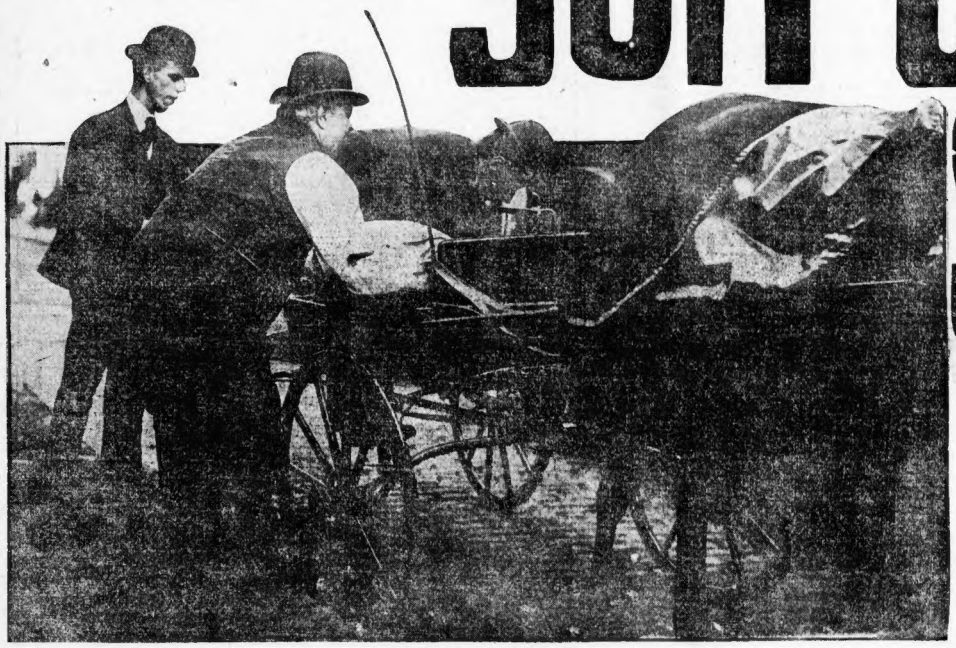
DEPUTY CHIEF NEAL SAYS POLICE HAVE STRONG CLUE TO SUIT CASE SLAYER



Snapshot by Boston American Photographer.

TAKING THE TORSO OF MURDERED WOMAN INTO BRIGGS'S UNDERTAKING ROOMS, WHERE AUTOPSY WAS PERFORMED.

In the picture, which was taken in front of the undertaking rooms on Howard street, the remains are shown in the white bundle which one of Under taker Briggs's assistants is taking from the wagon. The young man standing on the sidewalk is Edward A. McNeil, son of Police Chief McNeil of Winthrop, while bending over the buggy in the rear is Undertaker Charles Bennison of Winthrop.

Deputy Chief Declares Portion of Girl's Body Found at Winthrop Was Probably Thrown From Railroad and They Have Important Evidence as to the Identity of the Person Who Carried Suit Case.

Two new points developed by the police to-day seem to be of vital importance in their bearing on the mystery of murder revealed by the discovery of the body of a young woman, without head or limbs, in a dark green suit case, off the Winthrop Yacht Club pier.

One of these was the finding of what seemed to be the stockinged foot and limb of a woman; another the location of a woman who saw a person carrying a suit case which corresponded with the one in which the body was found.

William B. Pritchard, manager of the cafe at the Point Shirley Club, on Wednesday afternoon at 1 o'clock saw what seemed to be a stocking floating in the water 300 yards south of the Winthrop Yacht Club. The foot was up and seemed to have a foot in it. Mr. Pritchard tried to take the stocking from the water, but when he touched it with an oar it disappeared.

Autopsy Is Performed.

The other point, which is regarded as of equal importance, is the story of a woman found by the State police that she saw a person—whether man or woman does not yet appear because of official secrecy—carrying a suit case identical in description to that in which the body was found, through a street, presumably at Winthrop. To-day this woman will see the suit case. If it is the same the police may then gain a description of the person who carried it.

COLLIDES WITH UNKNOWN CRAFT

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Captain Boyesen of the oil tank steamer Ocean, which arrived here to-day from Rotterdam, reported that when ten miles west of Nantucket lightship yesterday he exchanged signals with the tank steamer Phoebus, bound from New York for Flushing, Holland. Captain Schierhorst, of the Phoebus, reported that his vessel had been in collision with an unknown steamer but did not state the extent of damage the Phoebus sustained.

CONGO SULTANS REBEL.

PARIS, Sept. 22.—Advices received to-day state that several of the sultans in the French Congo, South Africa, have revolted. Five white persons have been killed.

MISSING GIRLS OF GREATER BOSTON

The BOSTON AMERICAN prints herewith a list of missing girls or young women as reported to the police of Greater Boston. If its readers have any information regarding any of these persons, they may aid in hastening a solution of the Winthrop mystery by communicating with the AMERICAN at once. The following young women are reported missing:

FLORENCE G. CLARK, seventeen years old, of No. 20 Fountain street, Medford, daughter of A. G. Clark. Has been missing since a week ago last Wednesday. Was five feet four inches tall, of light complexion, weighed about 150 pounds, wore dark clothing, except a white waist; black [illegible], three tan coat, large picture hat, and low black shoes and black stockings. She graduated from the Medford High School last June, and worked for the Mafick[illegible] Sash Company up to the time of her disappearance.

MARY SEXTER, eighteen years old, living at No. 20 Fountain street, Medford. Has been missing since a week ago last Wednesday. She was of dark complexion, about five feet five inches tall, and weighed about 150 pounds. She wore a cap and dark clothing. She graduated from the Medford High School last June, and was employed by the Gilchrist Company until she disappeared.

MABEL MARKS, nineteen years old, living at No. 66 Orchard street, Medford, the daughter of Mrs. Mary Marks. She disappeared from her home three weeks ago. She was five feet five inches tall, of medium complexion, had blue eyes, and weighed 120 pounds. She wore a black walking skirt, white shirtwaist, red collarette, low tan shoes and tan stockings. She did not wear a hat. She was employed as a waitress in a boarding house on Warren street, Charlestown, up to the time of her disappearance and was a sophomore in the Medford High School, where she was to return this month.

SADIE MORRISON, sixteen years old, living at No. 174 Harvard street, Cambridge, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Morrison, disappeared on August 27.

MAY ETHEL LOWE, sixteen years old, living at No. 29 Thorndike street, Cambridge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Lowe, disappeared on September 9. She was large for her age. She wore a red tailor-made suit, with either red hat or white cap. The girl was a blonde and had blue eyes. She was a singer of considerable ability, and was to enter the New England Conservatory of Music this Fall.

PEARL RONNOW, sixteen years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Ronnow of No. 116B Harvard street, Cambridge, reported missing on September 9. She was employed in Cambridge.

MOST IMPORTANT CLUE IS A SCAR

The most important clue furnished by the mutilated trunk towards establishing the identity of the dead woman is that some time within a few months she had undergone an operation for appendicitis. Scarcely yet healed is the wound made in her right side and across the abdomen by the surgeon who then operated on her.

The other clues are hopeless. The trunk was wrapped in an oilcloth such as can be found in the office of any physician or in any hospital.

Apparently the suit case had been considerable wear but it was not possible to make out whether it ever had had the initials of any one stamped on it, or that it had otherwise been marked for identification. There is reason to believe the girl was not murdered in cold blood, but that she died as the result of an operation of an illegal nature, and that the horrible mutilation of the body was done in an effort to dispose of it, and to prevent tracing the perpetrators.

IS ANY WOMAN IN YOUR FAMILY MISSING? IF SO, NOTIFY BOSTON AMERICAN

If any woman member of your family who has ever undergone an operation for appendicitis is missing, please notify the BOSTON AMERICAN immediately by telephone, telegraph or in person, at No. 80 Summer Street.

In this way this newspaper seeks to identify the girl whose torso was found, without head, legs or arms, in a sample case in the water at Winthrop. The girl is described as 18 to 30 years old.

Identification of the body is made difficult by reason of the absence of all marks from the body, save the wound where an operation for appendicitis has been performed. With her identity established the perpetrator of the most brutal and mysterious crime New England has ever known may be traced.

WOMAN SAW STRANGER CARRYING MYSTERIOUS DRESS SUIT CASE

Important Clue in Murder at Winthrop Is Developed by Woman Interviewed by Police To-day.

the young woman died from an operation; that he felt reasonably certain of the place in which the operation was performed, and that a clue had been found as to the person who put the suit case in the water.

The theory of the State police is that the suit case was thrown into the water from the railroad bridge north of where the body was found, possibly from a passing train on the narrow gauge railroad, and that the case was carried south by the out-going tide.

Mr. Pritchard's story is that he was out in his motor boat between noon and 1 o'clock Wednesday and he saw the stocking some 300 yards south of the clubhouse. It sank when he tried to get it, but to-day he is searching for it again, believing it to have been one of the severed limbs of the young woman.

While these matters were being brought to light the autopsy on the torso was performed at Briggs's undertaking rooms in Howard street by Medical Examiner F. A. Harris. The result of this autopsy is not made known, and probably will not be for the present, the officials preserving the utmost secrecy in everything connected with the matter.

IMPORTANT CLUES.

There are two apparent clues in the matter which the police consider of vital importance, these on the body itself and wholly disassociated with the suit case of dark green in which the body was found. One of these clues was an appendicitis wound on the woman's side, evidently the result of a fairly recent operation. The other is the skill with which the body had been dismembered. This could have been done, police declare, by a physician, a surgeon or an advanced medical student.

By the appendicitis wound it is hoped to ultimately identify the young woman, and now, while one party of police are searching for the head and limbs of the body, others are tracing all those girls reported missing to the police. It would be comparatively easy, they assert, to trace a young woman who had had an operation for appendicitis.

BLOOD EXPERT PRESENT.

Dr. Harris, who performed the autopsy, arrived at Briggs's undertaking rooms on Howard street at about 10:50 o'clock, with his assistants, Dr. Brown, assistant professor of pathology at Tufts Medical School, and Officers Roche, Keating and Grady of the State police. Chief McNeil of the Winthrop police, and Special Officer Douglas of the Winthrop force.

Shortly after their arrival Professor Whitney of Harvard University, a famous blood expert, and now connected with the Dr. Wood, went into the room where the autopsy was performed. He will make an analysis of some of the organs.

Deputy Chief Neal of the State police, who was present at the autopsy, left the room hurriedly at 11:25 o'clock, and headed quickly for the State House for a conference with Chief Shaw. He refused to give out the object of the hurried departure.

BUT SHORT TIME IN WATER.

Expert opinion is that the body had been in the water not more than twenty-four hours, and that the girl had been dead a very short while after her torso was thus disposed of. The body was that of a girl evidently in the higher walks of life, well cared for, and the flesh was pink and firm, with absolutely no trace of decomposition.

Lacking any immediate report of a missing girl who would answer the description of the body, she was evidently under eighteen and thirty years, the police of Boston and Winthrop and the State police are searching for the head and limbs of the dead woman. They must be found. A cunning brain evidently lies back of the crime, one which would, presumably, dispose of the other parts of the body for all time.

Unless the head is found identification must come through the appendicitis wound. It is highly improbable that a young woman could have undergone such an operation and the consequent months of illness following without her immediate family knowing of it. Now the search is for a girl missing may ultimately mean an unraveling of the mystery.

AUTOPSY PERFORMED.

Strange, even bizarre, must have been the circumstances surrounding the final disposition of the body. Now it seems probable that the case containing the body, and bulging with its mutilated contents, was carried through the streets to a point on the shore, or else was taken out on a boat and dropped overboard.

The result of the autopsy to-day in Howard street is not yet known. From it is, however, that Medical Examiner Harris and those other physicians who performed the autopsy were only confirmed in their opinion that one of the most mysterious and brutal crimes in police annals was committed.

The first active move of the police was the thoroughly search of the second floor of Dr. Bailey's at No. 58 Howard street at 5 o'clock to-day, on a tip furnished by a medical examiner. The police found absolutely nothing that would implicate the physician.

They say that in all probability they will drop this end of the case. The search of the physician's home was made by Sergeant Joseph Merrill of the Joy Street Police Station, and State Officers Grady and Douglas. Dr. Harris himself his suspicion on the fact that yesterday, long Dr. Bailey saw him, Bailey acted suspiciously, dodging into a doorway.

BUNDLE A WOMAN DROPPED, LINEN

Officer John Walton of the Beachmont police force told to-day of detaining a woman who threw a bundle into the water from Winthrop bridge last Saturday afternoon, and whose mysterious actions made the police regard her suspiciously. She gave her name as Winifred Morphihan, and said she lived at No. 17 Cowperthwait street, Cambridge.

At first the woman was very excited, and almost hysterical. Officer Walton detained her for two hours while he and twenty others searched the Winthrop shore for the bundle they thought she had thrown into the water.

"She was carrying a bundle under her dress which roused suspicion of the party who first saw her, especially when she stepped on the bridge and went toward the rail," said Officer Walton, "and when I surmised that she might be trying to get rid of something, but I am now convinced that she didn't throw anything into the water. I examined the bundle and found it to contain some dirty linen. When I asked her why she was so excited she said it was the event that she had been half dead with the toothache for a number of days.

"We looked up the Cambridge address and it appeared to be fictitious to a point, when I questioned her sharply she said that she had been stopping there with a certain named Devine. Upon questioning her as to the reason of her being in Winthrop, she finally told me that she worked for Mrs. J. Norton at No. 90 Crest avenue, and, stating her statements to be correct, I let the woman go, after detention in Beachmont for more than two hours.

Clues Are Discarded.

"The clue of the woman on the bridge is discarded. The hospital theory is not entertained at present. The investigation in the West End of last night was of no consequence. No student cut up the girl. He wouldn't know enough.

"Only the most practiced hand could do it. After the autopsy an opinion may perhaps be warranted." Now the authorities are merely working."

BODY, CLOTH, CASE, 3 MYSTERY EXHIBITS

The exhibits in the Winthrop horror are three in number, the dismembered trunk of a young woman coolly murdered, a wrapper of thin, pliable, marbleized oilcloth, about a yard and a half in area, wrapped about the ghastly find, and a most extraordinary dress suit or sample case as the receptacle.

The first examination was made by the police by feeble light, the second is being made at the Briggs undertaking rooms on Howard street, under the direction of Medical Examiner Harris and assistants, in the presence of the State and Winthrop police.

One who assisted in the first examination said to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter:

"The trunk was that of a young woman. It was dismembered at the hip and shoulder joints and the operation of dismembership was extraordinarily clean and scientific. Only the most skilful handler of a knife could have done it. The knife used must have been a special one. The flesh showed red and raw. The body had not been in the water more than sixteen or seventeen hours. It had not started to whiten action of the water and the flesh soon does.

"The distinctive marks upon the body were two cuts. Only a superficial examination could be made of them. One cut was from the point of the breast bone to the pelvic region. It was straight and clean cut. The other was a lateral cut on the right side of the body at about the level of the stomach. It was perhaps four inches long, closed with five or six stitches of catgut. This cut was too high to denote an operation for appendicitis. It was just under the rim ribs. A woman's scar was much higher than a man's. I should say it was about above the diaphragm. This cut was at right angles with the other, and as stated was closed while the other was open and gaping. A surgical operation was perhaps involved.

Trunk Fitted Case.

"No other marks were upon the body. The trunk just fitted the case. If the case had been an inch shorter it would not have received the body.

"The trunk was wrapped about in white oil cloth. It is such as I have seen in tables, pliable and glazed on one side. The groundwork was white, but clouded. The whole gave a clouded white oil cloth effect. I cannot say if the clouds were black or blue. The material was not rubber, such as is generally used in operations.

"The case was most unusual in size and appearance and, the biggest I ever saw. It was of sole leather, but its color was black. Some thought it had been of tan color and was turned by the action of the water. I still believe it was black. It was smooth dead black, not olive and not drab, but black. It was fastened by a lock that was only spring, not fastened with a key, and with two end catches of the conventional sort. The lock was brass and the catches brass. I could not examine them closely enough to determine anything upon them. These will be looked for at the examination to-day. The case was otherwise conventional in look. What made it extraordinary to me was its great size and its color—black. I should say such a case would cost at least $15.

"Inside the case merely sheweed leather, no lining and no finish.

"The strap which was buckled about the case was, I should think, an outing belt, an ordinary one. I did not determine its length. The buckle was of nickel, not brass, substantially of an oval or part square, part round construction, about an inch and a half in diameter, of tan color.

Clues Are Discarded.

"The clue of the woman on the bridge is discarded. The hospital theory is not entertained at present. The investigation in the West End of last night was of no consequence. No student cut up the girl. He wouldn't know enough.

"Only the most practiced hand could do it. After the autopsy an opinion may perhaps be warranted." Now the authorities are merely working."

"A HORRIBLE CRIME DONE BY A COOL HAND"

"A horrible crime has been committed---the most horrible I have ever known. It is one of the most dastardly deeds in the long history of crime in Suffolk county. It was no bungling work. It was well done and by some cool hand."

---MEDICAL EXAMINER HARRIS.

Clues Which May Solve Dress Suit Case Murder

Victim, a girl, probably from eighteen to thirty years, height five feet four inches to five feet six inches, weight about 130 pounds, skin soft and smooth.

Mark of appendicitis operation on her right side, evidently performed within a few months. No other mark or scar on body.

Dress suit case in which body was found. Olive color, 26 inches long, 14 inches wide and six inches deep.

Strap probably a trunk strap of leather color, used to hold case closed, the lock not being sufficient.

White marbled oilcloth, evidently new, in which body was wrapped in dress suit case.

MANY THEORIES ARE PRESENTED

Theories of all kinds were put forth last night by almost every police official who worked on the case. One officer, who did not desire to be quoted, declared that the suit-case might have been taken from Boston on a coast-going steamer and had been inadvertently lost overboard. He also thought that it might have been taken out in a smaller craft, but any one standing in dispute of such a large bundle would not take any chances of being detected, and would hoard some large craft, where the possession of such a suit-case would not cause suspicion.

That the suit case was not in the water more than twenty-four hours at the most led the police to believe that it might have been cast into the water from the end of the yacht club float, or possibly thrown in from the shore. If it was thrown in the night before, the case might have been washed out some distance and then back again.

Although there were some of the members of the yacht club, as well as a few of the caretakers about the house and docks, none of them saw anything of the case until Allen and Pollard shouted to the boys in the boat to tow it in.

That it might have been blown beneath the float before the tide turned, the police say is not an impossibility.

Through agents at the railroad stations or wharfs the police hope to find some clue which will assist them in learning the source of the satchel. It is hoped, although not much confidence is placed in it, that some baggage handler on the wharves or at some one of the stations may remember having within the past day or two seen such a traveling case and may be able to recall some peculiar incident connected with it.

Is any female member of your family who has ever undergone an operation for appendicitis, or any other woman of your acquaintance missing?

If so, please notify the BOSTON AMERICAN, No. 80 Summer street, by telegraph, telephone or in person. This information may solve a strange and brutal crime.

F. H. PEABODY, BANKER, DEAD, HEART DISEASE

Boston Captain of Finance Expires Suddenly—Was Yachting Yesterday.

Francis H. Peabody, head of the banking firm of Kidder, Peabody & Co., close friend of J. Pierpont Morgan and one of the captains of finance in the United States, died suddenly from heart disease in his summer home at Beverly Cove to-day.

Mr. Peabody was apparently in the very best of health yesterday. He had been riding about Beverly in his auto during the early part of the day and in the afternoon went for a sail in his yacht. When he returned to his home he did not complain of illness. His sudden death came as a great shock to his family and friends.

There was no better known financier in New England that Francis H. Peabody. As head of his big banking house on Devonshire street he was in touch with all the millionaires and big bankers of the world. He took a prominent part in floating the big Japanese war loans in the United States, and had built up his firm to such a height that there is none in the world to-day that is of greater importance, unless it be J. P. Morgan & Co. or Kuhn, Loeb & Co. of New York.

Mr. Peabody was seventy-four years old. He came to Boston when but seventeen years of age and was employed by the old firm of John E. Thayer & Co. From a clerk he worked himself up so that in 1865 he was admitted to the firm, and the firm name changed to Kidder, Peabody & Co.

His ability as a financier made his firm one known the world over, and alliances with the big New York banking houses were made. On April 27, 1854, he married Miss Adelaide Kingsley of Canton, who survives him. They have a son, who is one of the partners in the house, Peabody & Company. In April they celebrated the fifty-first anniversary of their wedding.

Mr. Peabody was a director in the Boston Elevated Railway Company, and was also on the directorate of many other Boston business firms and financial institutions. When in Boston he made his home in a palatial private house at No. 247 Berkeley street, Back Bay. Their son, Frank E. Peabody, lives at No. 720 Commonwealth avenue.

CHEER PUBLIC OWNERSHIP AT WATSON RALLY

Candidate for House Speaks to Great Throng in the Open Air.

A great crowd assembled at Lenox street and Shawmut avenue to hear James A. Watson, candidate in Ward 18 for the Democratic nomination to the House, talk in favor of municipal ownership. He spoke in the open air from a landau. The soap box rostrum is temporarily out of commission.

"Municipal ownership," said Watson, who is best known as "Jerry" Watson, "is the only thing between the people and an industrial condition that will enslave the white men and women and girls who are waiting or recovering from operations made necessary by neglect.

Every one of these patients had plenty of warning in that bearing down feeling, pain at the left or right of the womb, nervous exhaustion, pain in the small of the back, leucorrhœa, dizziness, flatulency, displacements of the womb or irregularities. All of these symptoms are indications of an unhealthy condition of the ovaries or womb, and if not heeded the trouble will make headway until the penalty has to be paid by a dangerous operation, and a lifetime of impaired usefulness at best, while in many cases the results are fatal.

The following letter should bring hope to suffering women. Miss Lavella Adams, of the Colonnade Hotel, Seattle, Wash., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"About two years ago I was a great sufferer from a severe female trouble, pains and headaches. The doctor prescribed for me and finally told me that I had a tumor on the womb and must undergo an operation if I wanted to get well. I felt that this was my death warrant, but I spent hundreds of dollars for medical help, but the tumor kept growing. Fortunately I corresponded with an aunt in the New England States, and she advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it was said to cure tumors. I did so and immediately began to improve in health, and I was entirely cured, the tumor disappearing entirely, without an operation. I wish every suffering woman would try this great preparation."

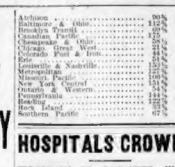
Just as surely as Miss Adams was cured of the troubles enumerated in her letter, just so surely will Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cure every woman in the land who suffers from womb troubles, inflammation of the ovaries, kidney troubles, nervous excitability and nervous prostration.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all young women who are ill to write her for free advice. Address, Lynn, Mass.

HOSPITALS CROWDED

MAJORITY OF PATIENTS WOMEN

Mrs. Pinkham's Advice Saves Many From this Sad and Costly Experience.



It is a sad but true fact that every year brings an increase in the number of operations performed upon women in our hospitals. More than three-fourths of the patients lying in those snow white beds are women and girls who are waiting or recovering from operations made necessary by neglect.

Every one of these patients had plenty of warning in that bearing down feeling, pain at the left or right of the womb, nervous exhaustion, pain in the small of the back, leucorrhœa, dizziness, flatulency, displacements of the womb or irregularities. All of these symptoms are indications of an unhealthy condition of the ovaries or womb, and if not heeded the trouble will make headway until the penalty has to be paid by a dangerous operation, and a lifetime of impaired usefulness at best, while in many cases the results are fatal.

VORENBERG'S

The Style Store of New England

Washington, Hanover and Elm Streets

To the man of taste-- a word of common sense

Nowadays a man is either one thing or another —well-dressed or "just clad."

When you stop to have another look at a man whose clothes seem to be a part of him, who is the personification of taste and character, it is a certainty he is wearing a hand-tailored suit.

Those machine-sewed, factory-made suits can never look the part even when they are new—and when they are three days old they are old.

Suits Hand-Tailored Throughout $15

We cry out against the suits made with a sewing machine and pressed into shape with a hot iron—We have shown multitudes how our suits are made, how by thousands of fine hand stitches their life shape is moulded right into them—and we stand ready to show you.

The most magnificent style showing ever assembled under one roof awaits you. We show ten styles where other stores show one—embracing all the latest fads, all the newest conservative models, all strictly hand-tailored throughout, irreproachable in style and unequalled in value.

GIRL'S DISMEMBERED BODY FOUND FLOATING IN WINTHROP HARBOR

SAMPLE CASE OPENED, SHOWS GHASTLY SIGHT

Mutilated Torso of Young Woman, With Head and Limbs Missing.

FEW CLUES TO IDENTITY

Alfred D. Allen and Randolph Pollard, both members of the Winthrop Yacht Club at Winthrop, were standing on the verandas of the club house yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock, looking out over the water where it beat against the yacht club pier. Two boys of about ten years, Leroy Talcott and Raymond Hodgdon, were rowing about aimlessly in a dory.

Finally the attention of the two men on the veranda was attracted by something black bobbing up and down in the water. One called the attention of the other man to it, and finally one of them called to the boys.

"Hey, boys!" he said, "bring that thing in."

The boys saw the black object and rowed for it.

"It's a dress suit case," one of them shouted. Then they rowed toward the float at the foot of the plazza steps, pushing the suit case ahead of them. At the steps Mr. Allen threw them the end of a rope and this they fastened to the handle of the case.

Bulged on Each Side.

Then the two men hauled up the suit case, noting as they did so its weight. The suit case bulged on each side, and was of black sole leather, or else had become black through the action of the water on it. It had a lock, but this was not fastened. Instead a leather strap, natural color, probably used for fastening a trunk, was around it. This held it closed tight.

The presumption of the two men and the boys was that the suit case had been dropped carelessly from a vessel either in the cove or else had been dropped overboard from a steamer further out at sea and washed in. The tide was then going out.

"Open It," said Mr. Pollard.

This was easily done by unfastening the leather strap and the clasps which held it at each end. Inside they found a bundle, wrapped in white mottled oilcloth, such cloth as is common for table covers, and is frequently used by physicians and in hospitals. They lifted out this bundle, which was heavy, and then unrolled it.

The Torso of a Woman.

There before them lay the torso of a woman. Both were startled for a moment, and looked at the symmetrical body in amazement. The head was missing, the arms were missing, the legs were gone. So recent had been death that the body was still pink, smooth as velvet and evidently that of a women well cared for and of a high social plane.

There was no trace of decomposition. Down the centre of the body from a point midway between the breasts and extending practically to the bottom of the stomach the skilful knife of an anatomical student had laid the body open. On the right was the carefully sewn wound of an appendicitis operation, well healed.

There were no ragged marks on the body. The dismemberment had been done skilfully; the limbs unfolded without a false slash of the knife, long diagonal incisions being made at the thighs and arms. The head and neck had been removed from low in the body. These cuts ran diagonally around and down the neck, starting from the collarbone to a point low in the breast bone. The front of the incisions terminated in a V.

Heart and Lungs in Place.

Parts of organs were removed, apparently, but the heart and lungs and other vital organs lay in place. There were indications, however, that these had been mutilated practically. Later, when Medical Examiner Harris was summoned, he confirmed this belief, after a hurried investigation preceding the autopsy to-day.

Startled into silence and awed in the presence of what seemed a hideous crime, the men were silent for a moment; then one of them raced for the telephone in the clubhouse and called up Chief of Police McNeil. Chief responded immediately and then notified Medical Examiner Harris.

With the assistance of the two men the body, the suit case and the oilcloth, in the corners of which were little spots of blood, were removed to police headquarters, where Dr. Harris had just arrived. In a back room of the station house Dr. Harris made his first examination of the corpse.

"The crime is not more than forty-eight hours old," he said finally. "Possibly it may have been committed within twenty-four hours, from what I learned by a quick examination. There are evidences, too, that the woman was in a delicate condition. A portion of the internal organs have been removed, I think. The autopsy will reveal that definitely."

Began Work of Investigation.

"What is the wound on the right side?" he was asked.

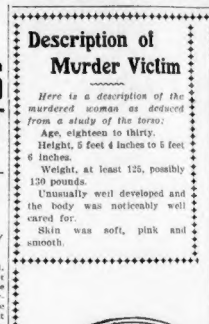
"Unquestionably an operation for appendicitis," he replied. "I cannot tell further about the case until after the autopsy. I will hold that autopsy at Briggs's under taking place in Howard street.

The body of the girl was then removed to a receiving tomb in the cemetery, where it remained until the autopsy to-day. But immediately Dr. Harris began the work of investigation. He and his men carefully examined the suit case, then notified the Boston police and the State police of the matter.

Immediately after the examination, Dr. Harris returned to Boston, where Attorney Grady of the State police was assigned to the case by Chief Hilton. Then plans were made for an extensive search.

"We shall search everything," he said Chief McNeal to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter. "What we will find I don't know. Up to the present time the case presents startling features that we cannot get much definite idea on."

There has been no woman reported missing to the Winthrop police. Neither is there a missing Boston woman on the books of the Boston police department who would fit the meagre description which can be obtained from a general look of how this murdered woman must have looked in life. Winthrop became wildly excited over the news of the murder, which was first told to them by the BOSTON AMERICAN. Editions of the paper containing the facts of the finding of the body were eagerly bought at all of Winthrop's many centres.



W. J. LENEIL, Chief of Police Winthrop

Description of Murder Victim

Here is a description of the murdered woman as deduced from a study of the torso:

Age, eighteen to thirty.

Height, 5 feet 4 inches to 5 feet 6 inches.

Weight, at least 125, possibly 130 pounds.

Unusually well developed and the body was noticeably well cared for.

Skin was soft, pink and smooth.

Correct Description of Dress Suit Case

Largest size made, olive green, 6 inches deep, 26 inches long and 14 inches wide. Not in even halves; cover about two inches deep.

No straps attached. Lock in centre, and two brass clasps of ordinary kind on either side.

No protected corners on top. Has small patch near handles.

Ordinary leather strap, about inch wide, with metal buckle, was strapped around it.

CURRENT MIGHT HAVE BROUGHT IT

By Alfred D. Allen,

Who, with Randolph Pollard, found the body.

It was shortly after 5 o'clock when Pollard and myself saw the edge of the suit case projecting out of the water a short distance in front of the club house. We called to a couple of boys in a boat and they tried to get it in so that we could hoist it up with a rope which they fastened to it. When we opened the case it was just as Pollard has described it—a ghastly sight. The thing that struck me first of all was that it was evidently the body of a young woman. It was well preserved, too, and from its appearance I should judge that it could not have been mutilated many hours before. It did not have the appearance of having been in the water long, either.

There was no mark on the suit case which was an unusually large one, about the dimensions given by Pollard, like a traveling man's sample case, nor were there any marks upon the body as far as we could see by which it could be identified.

Of course there was a lot of speculation as to where the body came from, and how it happened to drift to where we found it. Some of us thought it might have been dropped overboard off a ship in the harbor and carried in by the tide.

But I have sailed a boat about here for twelve years and know something about the currents, and it is my emphatic opinion that that case and its ghastly contents was not carried in here by the tide. If it had been carried in in the channel it would have remained in the channel, for the current is not strong enough at this point to suck it across the flats.

It is my opinion that the body was cast overboard at some point between the club house and Shirley Point. There is quite a current sweeping around from the point along the crescent shaped shore south of the club house. This current continues for an hour after the tide begins to ebb in the channel. If the body had been dropped into the water, either from the shore or from a boat, this current would carry it along toward the club house, and it would have a tendency to work out toward the channel as it probably was doing when we discovered it.

SUIT CASE FLOATING NEAR CLUB HOUSE

By Randolph Pollard,

Who, with Alfred D. Allen, found the body.

Alf Allen and I were walking along the pier of the yacht club about a quarter after five o'clock when we noticed the end of a suit case sticking out of the water about fifty feet from the southwest corner of the clubhouse.

We walked back to the clubhouse and around to the corner of the veranda overlooking the water. A couple of boys were out in a boat fooling around and we called to them to bring the thing in. In fact I called out to the boys in a joking way: "Bring that body in here until we see what it looks like."

Of course we never dreamed how we were hitting the nail on the head. The boys in the boat caught on to the joke as we thought, and pushed the submerged suit case in toward the clubhouse. We lowered a rope and they tied it to the handle. When we began to pull it up, it was heavier than we bargained for. We managed to get it up to the floor of the veranda.

It was a heavy case of tan sole leather, the color darkened a little from being in the water. It had a leather handle, a brass lock with the ordinary spring catch even on such cases, and the lock was on one either side of the lock toward the end. The cover was fastened by three iron or steel hinges. Around the middle of it a strap about an inch and a quarter or a half wide was fastened with a metal buckle. There were no initials or other marks on the outside of the case.

DISCLOSE GHASTLY FIND.

The case, by the way, was larger than the usual run of suit cases, being fully thirty inches long, eighteen inches wide and about eight inches deep.

We unfastened the clasps and broke open the lock. Inside was something wrapped up in white oil-cloth, the kind used for table covers, a plain white on both sides, one side a glazed finish and the other a dull finish.

We dumped the bundle out on the floor. There were no marks on the inside of the case. It was lined with the usual tan-colored crash.

We unfolded the oil-cloth and the ghastly contents of the case were disclosed. It was the trunk of a woman, evidently a young woman, with the head, arms and legs severed close to the body.

The flesh had not mortified. In fact, where the limbs and head had been severed, the flesh was clean looking, and in the corners of the oilcloth, which was about two yards square, were small pools of fresh blood.

We rapped it up in the oil-cloth again, and Ernest Schmidt, the janitor, telephoned to Chief of Police O'Neil. The chief came over to the clubhouse about twenty-five minutes of six and took it away.

At the time we saw the body, the tide had been ebbing for an hour. I could not tell in what direction the suit case was moving. In fact it didn't appear to be moving, except to bob up and down. It does not seem that the case could have been in the water so very long or it would have had more water in it, and probably sunk. As it was there was some water in it when we pulled it out, but not very much.

One thing is certain, and that is that the case could not have been where it was first seen by us more than six hours before, for at that time it was low tide and the locality was absolutely free from water. It must have been carried there either with the tide when it came in, or by the strong current that eddies around from Shirley Point toward the club house even after the tide begins to ebb.

PLYMPTON HELD IN $5,000 FOR HEARING LATER

Pleads "Not Guilty" of Attack on His Friend, Whose Condition Is Serious.

BUYS MATTRESS FOR CELL

Special to the Boston American.

PLYMOUTH, Sept. 22.—Elsie Finnie, stage star and beloved by the maudlin girl because of his success in romantic roles, was arraigned in court here to-day on the charge of assault with intent to murder and taken back to a cell to await the finding of two bondsmen who will give $5,000 surety for his appearance at the hearing a week hence.

Accustomed to luxurious apartments, he is chained under restraint in a dismally furnished cell, into which light dimly streams through prison bars. He has often played the part of a prisoner before the footlights, now it is grim reality to a man who has been applauded by multitudes.

He showed his regard for creature comfort when locked up in a police station cell last night. He viewed its disgust the mattress on the prison cot.

Plympton Buys Mattress.

"Here," he said to a turnkey, "I can't sleep on this dirty thing. Won't you take this money, like a good fellow, and buy me a new mattress?"

It was bought, and after Plympton was taken from the court room to a cell in the jail, he said:

"I'd like to have some one bring up that new mattress. Will they provide me with food while I'm locked up or have I got to buy it? Will they let me buy it? His coolness was shown by several incidents while he was before Judge W. H. Osborne at East Bridgewater in court here. When the complaint, sworn to by Deputy Sheriff Joseph T. Collingwood, was read by clerk Benjamin A. Hathaway Plympton said:

"There's a mistake there. The complaint says 'Edmund Plympton at Plympton, on September 13, assaulted George Harris with intent to murder.' Now, that's wrong, if it refers to me. My name is Elsie, or This was true, he had been formally arraigned, and the complaint had to be corrected, and another arraignment followed. While the papers were being made as suggested by the prisoner, Plympton sat and coolly read the morning newspapers. He acted like a well-bred man who has to wait while he himself in any ordinary, but disagreeable predicament. When his bail was fixed, it was indicative more of his physical than his mental condition.

Fixes Bonds at $5,000.

"I'll fix the bonds at $5,000, and I shall require two sureties," said Judge Osborne after Plympton pleaded "Not guilty."

"I am afraid that I cannot get bondsmen in a minute," said Plympton.

"Then you will have to be committed to jail at once," said the judge. "You can arrange for giving bonds afterward."

Plympton also said that he, too, wanted a physician. He walked out of the court room with the ease of an actor going to a rehearsal. By 10 o'clock he was in jail.

Among those in the courtroom was Fred erick W. Thomas, a neighbor of Plympton at Silver Lake. As he was leaving, the court officers said, to be of aid to the prisoner.

CRUSHED UNDER CAR TWO HOURS

Watching Freight Collision Train Toppled Over Upon Him.

ARM MASHED TO SHOULDER

Clarence J. Bourne of East Whitman, who was pinned for two hours under the wreckage of a freight car after a collision at the South avenue crossing in Whitman, is lying in a critical condition at the Massachusetts General Hospital. He was brought to this city to-day with Dr. F. J. Hamley constantly by his side. Hopes are entertained for his recovery.

He was standing at the crossing when the cars collided and one toppled over upon him. Firemen and railroad men worked in desperate haste to liberate him.

"This is awful to bear," he moaned, "Hurry up all you can, boys."

A crowd watched the rescue work and cheered when Bourne was liberated at last and tenderly carried into the railroad station. His right arm was crushed from wrist to shoulder and he was terribly cut.

President Theodore Roosevelt's Own Story,

"HOW I KILLED THE BIGGEST BEAR"

Strenuous Chief Executive Gives Graphic Account of Recent Colorado Hunt.

How President Roosevelt killed the biggest bear of his recent hunt in Colorado is told by himself in Scribner's Magazine for October. The article is a detailed account of the adventures of the hunting party, the country they travelled, their life in camp and the wild animals and birds which they found in the region. The President's story of how the great black bear was hunted to his death follows:

"When we first saw him he was sitting up on a point of rock surrounded by the pack, his back for showing to the advantage. Then he moved off, threatening the dogs, and making short of his footing as he called a walking bay. He was a sullen, powerful beast, and had been severely galled by the hounds before he feared the pack, and how confident he was to his own forty strength. By this time the dogs had been after him for a couple of hours, and as there was no water on the mountainside we feared they might be getting exhausted, and took toward him as fast as we could.

Bear Threatens Pack.

"It was a hard climb up to where they were, and we had to lead the horses. Just as we came in sight of him, across a deep gully which ran down the steep mountain side, he broke lay and started off, threatening the foremost of the pack as they dared to approach him. They were all around him, and for a minute I could not fire; then as he passed under a pinon I got a clear view of his great round stern and pulled the trigger. The bullet went home, and he rolled downhill, the hounds yelling with excitement as they closed in on him. He could still play havoc with the pack, and three was need to kill him at once. I leaped and slid down my side of the gully as he rolled down life. Selecting his opening I rolled down life. Selecting his opening I rolled down life. Selecting his fore quarters, and with another bullet I broke his neck between the shoulders.

"Immediately all the dogs began to worry the carcass, while their savage baying echoed so loudly in the narrow, steep gully that we could with difficulty hear one another speak. It was a wild scene to look upon, as we scrambled down to where the dead bear lay on his back between the rocks. He did not die wholly unavenged, for he had killed one of the terriers and six other dogs were more or less injured; the chase of the bear is grim work for the pack.

"Jim, usually a very wary fighter, had a couple of deep holes in his thigh, but the most unhandled of the wounded dogs was Shorty. With his usual dauntless courage he had gone straight at the bear's head. Being such a heavy, powerful animal, I think if he had been hanged up he would have died of his wounds; but, dodged and prevented the beast from doing much harm to him. As it was, the bear hit through the side of Shorty's head, and bit him in the shoulder, and again in the hip, inflicting very bad wounds. Once the fight was over Shorty lay down on the hillside, unable to move.

"When we started home we put him beside a little brook, and left a piece of bear meat by him, as it was obvious we could not get him to camp that day. Next day one of the boys went back with a pack horse to take him in, but half-dead got met him struggling toward camp and returned. Late in the afternoon Shorty turned up while we were at dinner, and staggered forward, wagging his tail with enthusiastic delight at seeing his friends. We fed him, and he could not hold another mouthful; then he curled up in a dry corner of the rock-tent and slept for forty-eight hours, and two or three days afterward was able once more to go hunting.

He Shot Him in the Back.

They were all around him and for a minute I could not fire. Then as he passed I got a clear view of his great round stern and pulled the trigger.—From President Roosevelt's story of his Colorado hunting trip.

Dispatches Bruin After Dogs Had Suffered Severely and Animal's Hips Were Broken.

"The bear was a big male, weighing 330 pounds."

Kills a Grizzly.

President Roosevelt in this article also describes some thrilling adventures which he has had with other bears on other occasions. Here is one of them:

"On but one occasion was I ever regularly charged by a grizzly. To this animal I had given a mortal wound, and without any effort at retaliation he bolted into a thicket of what, in my hurry, I thought was laurel, it being composed in reality of a species of thick-growing berry bushes. On my following him and giving him a second wound, he charged very determinedly, taking the most terrible punishment without flinching. I just escaped the charge by jumping to one side, and he died immediately after striking at me as he rushed by.

"This bear charged with his mouth open, but made very little noise after the growl or roar with which he greeted my second bullet. I mention the fact of his having kept his mouth open, because one or two of my friends who have been charged have informed me that in their cases they particularly noticed that the bear charged with his mouth shut. Perhaps the fact that my bear was shot through the lungs may account for the difference, or it may simply be another example of individual variation."

RALSTON JURY FINDS VERDICT OF SUICIDE

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Sept. 22.—The inquest into the death of Archibald Ralston of North Woburn, Mass., which occurred here under mysterious circumstances on September 13, resulted in the jury bringing in a verdict of suicide. The proprietors of the Delmonico restaurant were severely censured by the jury for their efforts to avoid notoriety at the cost of the man's life, and poisoning by cyanide of potassium was given as the cause of death.

The proprietors of the place earned the censure of the jury by practically admitting that an attempt was made to conceal facts to avoid notoriety.

Lieutenant Stephen reprimanded Coroner Leland, and said he opened the Ralston letter in his official capacity as police officer, and had advised it be kept quiet in his private capacity as a physician.

Hattie Thiebault told of her trip to Santa Cruz with Ralston, and subsequently rejoining him here and of his twice mixing a milky fluid which he asked her to share with him.

Dr. Scarth reiterated his story of the affair, but created a sensation by adding: "I may account for the difference, or it may simply be another example of individual variation."

TWO INSANE CONVICTS STILL ELUDE POLICE

Frank W. Wiley, one of the insane convicts who escaped from the Bridgewater State Farm last Sunday, has been seen in Mansfield. A man answering perfectly his description called at the electric light station there and asked for a drink of water. He appeared weary and footsore and said that he was in a hurry to get to Providence, where his aunt had left him $17,000.

"All the cops in the country are after me," the stranger explained, when the engineer at the station asked him why he did not jump a freight train for Providence.

Later in the day a conductor and motorman thought they saw Wiley in Swansea at 4 p. m. and at Seekonk at 5 p. m. The latter place is seven miles from Providence.

The negro, Minot St. Clair Francis, who escaped from Bridgewater with Wiley, has not yet been located. Reports of arrests of suspects have been received from several places, but none have been identified as the missing lunatics. A reward of $100 is offered by the State police for the arrest of Francis and $25 for the capture of Wiley.

BLACKMAIL SCANDAL IS IN COURT

Special to the Boston American.

LAWRENCE, Sept. 22.—Sensations are promised to-day when Mayor Cornelius Lynch, City Marshal James P. O'Sullivan, Police Inspector Murphy and Joseph Jackson, a prominent wholesale liquor dealer, are called to testify in the defense of ex-Alderman William P. White, Matthew Dolgrey Rippon, M. J. Ryan, William H. McMullen and Patrick H. Casey, officers of the Municipal League, charged with conspiracy to extort money from the five hotel keepers of the city.

Both these officers of the league had Frank Libby before the police court for illegal liquor selling Judge Mahoney hinted that the arrest saved somewhat of blackmail. The hotel keepers then banded together and had the officers of the Municipal League arrested.

William Hanrihan, proprietor of the Hotel Brunswick, on the witness stand has testified that he paid McMullen $200 to destroy all evidence in the Libby case. He says each of the five hotel-keepers contributed $40. In spite of this the case of Libby was brought before the court, Hanrihan says.

MORGAN STAR WITNESS IN N. Y. LIFE PROBE

Inquisitor Hughes Wants the Testimony of Man Who Juggles Millions.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—J. Pierpont Morgan will be the star witness before the Armstrong insurance investigating committee. This was declared to-day to be the general understanding before the committee members and those who are intimately connected with the investigation.

Chief Inquisitor Hughes is said to have decided that Mr. Morgan's testimony will be vital to the success of the investigation, especially in view of what was divulged on the stand by George W. Perkins, vice-president of the New York Life, and a partner in the banking firm of J. Pierpont Morgan & Co., regarding his transactions with the Morgan firm on behalf of the New York Life.

When Mr. Morgan goes to the stand he will be asked to tell in detail "the exact nature and scope of the deals with his firm and the New York Life, and if it is true that in the four years since Mr. Perkins became a member of the firm the purchase of stocks aggregating in par value $39,236,676 were made by the New York Life from J. Pierpont Morgan & Co."

Like a lightning flash from a starry sky came the sensational development of the $132,000,000 mystery in the connection of J. Pierpont Morgan with the New York Life Insurance Company.

Ruled by Morgan.

It dwarfed all other talk of millions involved in "joint account" syndicates and turned the thoughts of the legislative investigating committee toward the fact that had been gradually developing all day—that J. Pierpont Morgan is the great dominating figure in the New York Life Company and holds it in thrall through the control of its investments by George W. Perkins, his partner, and vice-president of the insurance company.

"Is it true that $132,000,000 of the investments of the New York Life Insurance Company are the interests of the J. Pierpont Morgan firm?" was the question asked by Charles E. Hughes and which was not satisfactorily answered by Mr. Perkins, then on the stand.

This sensation developed towards the end of a long session devoted to delving into the tangled skein of complicated "joint account" transactions. It came when the members of the committee were almost ready to fall asleep in their chairs as they listened yawningly to the dreary recitation of long lines of figures, and statements of investments made and profits shared with outside financiers.

Mr. Perkins had no answer ready, so the long list of investments, all of which are said to be in the possession of the New York Life Company, and floated at some time by the Morgan firm, was handed to him by Mr. Hughes to check off. According to the last report of the New York Life Company, its investments in bonds reached the total of $294,309,702.

Morgan Controls Company.

This matter is to be gone into thoroughly before the investigation closes, for it will be shown ultimately that the New York Life Insurance Company is as completely in the control of J. Pierpont Morgan as though he owned it.

The connecting link has always been George W. Perkins, and before his testimony is concluded much will be brought out to show the manner in which he has made the insurance company contributory to the great wealth of Mr. Morgan.

During the investigation purchases of bonds from the Morgan firm to the value of nearly thirty millions were developed by the testimony of Mr. Perkins, and it was then that the New York Life Insurance Company had bought of the J. Pierpont Morgan bonds of a par value of $39,236,675 was shown by Mr. Hughes in a statement prepared for him by the Armstrong committee and introduced in evidence, covering the period from March 15, 1901, until September 29, 1905.

Mr. Perkins also presented a statement showing that he had turned over to the New York Life Insurance Company all the profits he had made from it as a member of the Morgan syndicate.

The mysterious connection of the Morgan firm and the life insurance company has only been touched upon as yet, however, and by the time the investigation is ended, transactions of this sort will be shown to be trivial compared to the real bulk of business that flows from the insurance company's massive building on Broadway to the genial, portly home of the Morgan forces in Wall street.

OIL TRUST'S PROFIT $1,000,000 A MONTH

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—One million dollars a month is the profit which the Standard Oil Company will derive from the increase in prices on refined petroleum. The advances made during the last few weeks average about ten cents a barrel on crude and fifteen to twenty cents on refined oil. The advance in crude oil goes to the producers. The Standard Oil Company does not own many oil wells, but it owns the pipe lines, and therefore it can make almost any price it sees fit on crude oil.

NEWSBOYS NOW HAVE $2,262 IN COLLEGE FUND

General Educational Committee to Devise Means to Raise Balance Needed.

There is still needed a little more than half the amount necessary to complete the Boston Newsboys' Scholarship Fund, with which ambitious newspaper lads will be enabled to secure a liberal education. Already some twenty newsboys have filed applications to be considered as candidates for participation in the benefits of the fund.

There is now on hand $2,262. It is necessary that there shall be $5,000. Some time during next week a general educational committee is to be formed, consisting of three members of the Newsboys' Protective Union and four prominent citizen men outside the organization. This committee will meet to devise means for securing the balance of cash necessary.

The BOSTON AMERICAN, which has received more than half the money already contributed for the benefit of the fund, will continue to accept contributions of any amount from those who are willing to aid so worthy an object. They may be sent to this office, where they will be placed to the credit of the fund trustees, and acknowledged in the columns of the newspaper.

Kidder, Peabody & Co. of Devonshire street are the treasurers of the fund.

TWO IN SUICIDE PACT; ONE TRIES TO KEEP WORD

Other Party to the Agreement Grows Weak-Hearted and Disappears.

Trying to fulfil his part in a suicide pact, Leva Prenbisy of Southbridge, who has been in Boston looking for work, took a quantity of paris green in a room on Harrison avenue. But he not become frightened when the poison began its work in his stomach, and called on Dr. Adams at No. 1,637 Tremont street he might not now be alive.

In his search for work about the city Prenbisy met a man named Smith. They looked about the city together, and at last both became discouraged. The men decided that it was hardly worth while continuing the struggle longer, and Smith suggested that they commit suicide.

Each swallowed a quantity of paris green. Prenbisy soon began unconsciousness. When he recovered he made his way to Dr. Adams's office and informed the doctor of attempt upon his life.

The doctor administered an emetic and did his utmost to relieve the unfortunate man. He was removed to the City Hospital. It is believed that he will recover.

The police were unable to find any trace of Smith, nor did they receive any report of his attempt upon his life.

W. L. Douglas makes and sells more men's $3.50 shoes than any other manufacturer in the world.

$10,000 REWARD to anyone who can disprove this statement.

W. L. Douglas $3.50 shoes have by their excellent style, easy fitting, and superior wearing qualities, achieved the largest sale of any $3.50 shoe in the world. They are just as good as those that cost you $5 to $7—the only difference is the price. If I could take you into my factory at Brockton, Mass., the largest in the world under one roof making men's fine shoes, and show you the infinite care with which every pair of Douglas shoes is made, you would realize why W. L. Douglas $3.50 shoes are the best shoes produced anywhere.

If I could show you the difference between the shoes made in my factory and those of other makes, you would understand why Douglas $3.50 shoes cost more to make, why they hold their shape, fit better, wear longer, and are of greater intrinsic value than any other $3.50 shoe on the market to-day.

DOUGLAS SHOES WEAR WELL.

"A year ago last November I purchased a pair of W. L. Douglas $3.50 shoes, which I have worn constantly since, and they are now in condition for four months' wear more."
D. F. WELLING, 46 Harvard Street.

BOYS SCHOOL AND DRESS SHOES, $2.00 AND $1.75.
Boys wear them longer, look better fit better, hold their shape and wear longer than any other makes. Just like W. L. Douglas men's $3.50 shoes, the most popular shoes and same leathers for $3.00 and $1.75.

Only Best Color Eyelets used; that will not wear brassy.

CAUTION.—None genuine without W. L. Douglas name and price stamped on bottom. Take no substitute. Sold in W. L. Douglas exclusive shoe stores in the principal cities, and by the best shoe dealers everywhere.

POLICE RENEW CHASE DEATH MYSTERY PROBE

Inquiry Into Home Life of Dead Swampscott Woman Increases Suspicion.

PURSUING NEW CLUES

Still convinced, after a two hours' interview with Leonard and Charles E. Phillips, that Mrs. Chase came to her death at the hands of some other person, and that she did not commit suicide, State Deputy Neal and Chief Harris of the Swampscott police force start to-day with renewed energy in an effort to solve the mysterious case.

The visit of Deputy Neal and Chief Harris to the two brothers was made for the purpose of obtaining a detailed and connected statement from them in reference to the home life of the Chases. When they left the house Deputy Neal said:

"We are in possession of much information that is suspicious, ingressively so, but you can't accomplish anything on mere suspicion. You have got to have something stronger than that, and we have not been able to get it yet. We have no direct evidence that a crime was committed.

"I have reached the conclusion, however, that if Mrs. Chase was not insane when she made certain statements preceding her death, which we have absolute proof that she did make, then she was a very much wronged woman.

"It is a most puzzling case, and grows more perplexing the more we delve into it. There is unquestionably an abundance of suspicious circumstances in which motive or existing opportunity is not lacking, yet this is offset by other conditions. We are going to keep at work investigating the mystery."

Farewell Letter Genuine.

As one result of the visit of the two officials to the brothers of Mrs. Chase, the genuineness of the farewell letter sent by the woman was fully established. The officers were enabled to compare the handwriting with that of other letters known to have been written by her, and they tally exactly.

"Her writing is of such a distinctive character," says Deputy Neal, "that I do not believe it susceptible of imitation except by a trained penman. There is no question of the authenticity of this farewell letter."

It has also been decided that the letter written by Mrs. Chase some five years ago and delivered to Leonard Phillips on Sunday has no material bearing upon the case and it has been eliminated from consideration.

The body of the pet dog found dead across the bryant of Mrs. Chase will not be exhumed, as it was at first proposed. The officers have decided that, even though chloral should be found in its stomach, this fact would be of no value to the case as it is reasonable argued that Mrs. Chase might have administered it to prevent the animal from barking.

A significant fact in connection with this case is that Leonard Phillips, who was at first convinced that his sister had taken her life, is now equally strongly convinced that she did not do so. He is determined to press the investigation to the utmost. He explained his views to the two officers at their last interview, but it is announced that his theories are such as would not hold water in any court of law, and he has nothing substantial upon which to base them.

Wants Thorough Probing.

Mr. Phillips declares, however, that he will not rest until the matter is thoroughly investigated and, if necessary, he will hire private detectives. He declares that when the will of Mrs. Chase is filed, the Phillips' interests will be heard from.

Deputy Neal has reached the conclusion that Mrs. Chase was not insane when she made the statement to Mrs. Frank, the dressmaker, just prior to her death.

"I have talked," said he, "with women other than Mrs. Frank, the dressmaker whose Mrs. Chase employed, to whom the dead woman confided her fear of violent death. These women have told me that Mrs. Chase had related matters to them which, if uttered by a sane person, tells a story of misery and persecution.

"But when we weigh these stories we are confronted with the assertion that Mrs. Chase was insane when she made them. We are told that she was eccentric, that she had delusions and hallucinations, and her husband says that on one occasion she averred that David, her dead brother, was sitting in a chair in her room."

SHIPS CRASH, 1 BADLY DAMAGED

Special to the Boston American.

CHATHAM, Cape Cod, Sept. 22.—Two schooners were in collision off the Orleans lifesaving station shortly after midnight. The beach patrol reports, and one, the Herbert of Rockland, Me., granite laden and bound for Newport, R. I., was badly damaged. She lost her bowsprit and all her head gear, and with jib and stays dragging under her bow, slowly sailed south to Monomoy Shoals, where she was rescued by a distress signal and anchored.

The lifesavers did not learn the name of the other schooner. She was north bound, and bent on her course, remaining ready in command of the Herbert. She is a two masted vessel.

Price Demonstration for Friday

Illustrating in a Most Practical Way the Low-Price-Making Powers of the Siegel Stores

This Friday brings a great object lesson to the New England people of the way a Siegel store can sell merchandise of desirable character at prices that are absolutely underneath competition. It is tremendous events like these that establish our leadership and prove the wisdom of trading with this newest and greatest New England store.

Our magnificent building and palatial furnishings have attracted unheard-of attention and caused a tremendous amount of enthusiastic praise—but we do not expect the buying public to patronize us solely because we have the handsomest store and most up-to-date equipment—we shall merit your patronage through the high quality of our goods and the attractiveness of our prices.

It is to force this truth home that we are holding this Friday price-demonstration as a lesson in household economies for the purchasing populace.

50 WITNESSES TO APPEAR IN SCHOOL LIBEL SUIT

LIVELY TILTS AT THE TRIAL OF LAWYER

Attacks Character of Head Master and Teachers and Pupils Will Testify.

PETITION STARTS TROUBLE

Sensational testimony is looked for when certain teachers and pupils of the Washington School in the West End take the witness stand in the case of Lawyer Robert L. Silverman, who is the defendant in a suit for criminal libel, instituted by Walter L. Harrington, head master of the school. The case will be resumed in the criminal session of the Municipal Court at 2 o'clock before Judge Adams.

The case against Silverman is the result of a petition which he issued protesting against the reappointment of Harrington when the latter came up for re-election before the school committee last June. In the petition, which is said to have been largely circulated throughout the West End, and was also presented to the school committee, it was alleged that Harrington was unfit for the position because his general character was bad; his conduct toward teachers and pupils was bad; he exerted an influence antagonistic to the welfare of the West End; he had been guilty of misconduct and favoritism, and had seriously caused public funds to disappear.

The hearing on the petition, which is now in the hands of the Third Division Committee of the School Board, has been adjourned till September 26, for that body, Mrs. Julia Duff, the well-known musician and member of the school committee, and a sister of Harrington, the complainant in the libel suit, is also a member of the division committee which will hear the petitioners next week.

Circulation of Petition.

But four witnesses were examined on yesterday's trial, and their testimony had largely to deal with the manner in which the alleged libelous petition had been circulated. When the case was called Judge R. Murphy, counsel for Harrington, asked that all the witnesses be excluded from the court room, a proposition to which Edward F. McClennen, attorney for the defendant, agreed.

The hearing was enlivened by a number of legal tilts between the lawyers over the admissibility of certain copies of the petition as evidence that libel had been committed. Frederick L. Smith, a retired stenographer, testified that Silverman had brought to him a written petition of which he had made a typewritten copy, which was submitted to the court and later was returned to Silverman by the defendant's counsel.

In the petition, copy made by Smith the fifth clause in the petition, protesting against the reappointment of Harrington, had been marked out with a lead pencil, but not obliterated. This clause referred to the alleged misappropriation of public funds, by turning in bills for extra teachers, while Harrington resigned and had been engaged.

Attorney McClellan asked that the judge rule upon whether the copy of description made by Smith be taken as evidence of libel, and also to compel counsel for the complainant to produce the original petition placed before the School Board.

Judge Adams ruled that he should call the drawing of the pencil marks through the clause did not obliterate the clause, and was to be held as a publication of libel, and that he should determine the case upon the copy presented to him unless the original petition could be produced. At this point a dramatic situation arose. Three times Counsel Murphy requested the opposing attorney to produce the copy of the petition presented to the School Board, and as many times the latter refused saying he had not brought it with him.

Asked to Withdraw Petition.

Thornton D. Apollonio, secretary of the School Committee, was the first witness and he testified to the appointment of Walter L. Harrington as headmaster of the Washington School. He also went into details regarding the method of appointing teachers. He testified that Silverman had brought a petition into his office last June, protesting against the reappointment of Harrington, which was to be passed upon a few days later.

The secretary then turned it over to the president of the board, and, in accordance with custom in such matters, the petition was laid over for action. Several weeks ago Silverman came to the committee rooms and asked if it were possible to withdraw the petition and was informed it was too late.

Smith, the stenographer, was the next witness and he told of the visit of Silverman to his office, which is in the same building as that of the former, and testified to a written petition in his copy. The copy of the petition was shown to him for identification and the clause struck on out was called to his attention. Smith averred it was erased only after it had left his office. Then followed the long legal struggle in relation to proving the alleged libel to the original petition or the one introduced by the government.

The last two witnesses were J. F. Donnelly and Samuel Varney, who told at length about the meetings of various organizations and fraternal organizations at which Silverman was present and spoke against the reappointment of Harrington and asked for signatures for the petition. It is said about fifty witnesses will be called in the case and some startling testimony is promised by both sides.

SELECT THAYER MIKASA FIRE TO PRESIDE FROM BOMB?

Congressman John R. Thayer of Worcester will preside over the State convention of the Democrats in Faneuil Hall on October 2. This has been decided upon by the executive committee of the Democratic State Committee. Osborne Howes, of Brookline will be chairman of the committee on resolutions. Arthur Lyman, chairman of the executive committee, was authorized to draw up resolutions on the death of Mayor Collins.

TOKIO, Sept. 22.—Regarding the battleship Mikasa disaster, strong doubt is now expressed that the fire started at the base of the mainmast. It is believed the conflagration must have been due to an explosion from the outside, which was followed by a greater explosion.

Otherwise it is unexplainable why the flames were not extinguished by the constant stream of fire hydrants, which had remained calm under the hottest fire from the Russian guns.

Questions Which Sughrue Must Answer

It is a CRIME under the laws of Massachusetts to offer a public official a bribe to influence his official action.

Alderman Linehan, in a public speech last night declared that an offer of a bribe was made to him by a Dock Trust official to influence his action in the East Boston street grab.

He declared that he produced before the District Attorney a witness to corroborate this statement.

But the Dock Trust official who offered the bribe was not prosecuted.

Why was this crime not punished, District Attorney Sughrue?

Have you one standard of law-enforcement for the rich and another for the poor?

Why is it impossible to secure the conviction, or even arrest, of a RICH GRAFTER in Boston?

If you do not answer these questions, Mr. Sughrue, the people will answer them for you at the polls.

BRIBE OFFERED LINEHAN BY AGENT OF DOCK TRUST

That an official of the National Dock Trust offered him a bribe to vote for the East Boston street grab, and that the offer was made in the presence of a witness, was the explicit statement made last night by Alderman Frank J. Linehan at a public meeting in Lucerne Hall, East Boston.

Alderman Linehan also made public, for the first time, the name of the witness who heard the offer of bribery made. Mr. Brazzell of South Boston. He further announced that he produced Mr. Brazzell before District Attorney Sughrue to corroborate his statement of the crime that had been committed in attempting to buy his vote.

The offering of a bribe is a crime. Here is the law:

Section 6, Chapter 210, Revised Laws of 1902.

Whosoever corruptly gives, offers or promises to a legislative, judicial, county or municipal officer, or to an officer of a republican form of government, or to any person whatever, with a view to influence his act, vote, opinion, decision or judgment upon any matter, question, cause or proceeding which may be pending, or may by law come or be brought before him in his official capacity, or as considération for any speech, work or service in connection therewith, shall be punished by imprisonment in the State Prison for not more than five years, or by a fine of not more than $1,000 and imprisonment in jail for not more than one year.

This is the story of the offering of a bribe to an aldermanic official, as told under the above statute, as told last night by Alderman Linehan:

"I stood at the corner of Lewis and Webster streets on the day the Board of Aldermen came out to inspect the Old National Dock Trust tracks, with Brazzell of South Boston. An official of the Dock Trust offered me a bribe at that time. He offered me money to support his track petition. 'What is your price? What are your terms?' he asked me. 'I will give you anything, for we want peace.'

"I asked this official if he be serious, and he said he would give me money if I would support his scheme. He said it was unnecessary for him to say more than I knew what he meant. I told him I would not be bought, and left him.

"All this evidence, with Mr. Brazzell to corroborate it, was given to District Attorney Sughrue. For my part, if that fact is not sufficient, I am willing to resign my seat in the Board of Aldermen.

"Would things have gone in that way under Jerome of New York, or Folk of Missouri?"

Alderman Linehan was frequently interrupted by great applause.

HARPER WORSE; AFRICAN KING FAMILY COMING CRUCIFIES MAN

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—Members of the family of President William R. Harper of the University of Chicago are hurrying back to Chicago because of a sudden and serious relapse the famous educator has undergone. His brother, Professor Paul Harper, and his son Paul have arrived, and Samuel Harper, an elder son, is expected to arrive in New York from Europe on October 1.

While most of the family and his legal clans report that he is resting comfortably, some of them doubts that Dr. Harper is failing fast.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—A message to a church missionary society states that a man was crucified at Akpe, in Nigeria, by the king of Uzhoro as a sacrifice at an annual festival.

It is believed that human sacrifices are made frequently among these tribes, notwithstanding efforts made by the English under government by white people.

For the Little Ones

To Keep Their Digestion Perfect Nothing is so Safe and Pleasant as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets

Thousands of men and women have found Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets the safest and most reliable preparation for any form of indigestion or stomach trouble.

Thousands of people who are not sick but are well and wish to keep well, take Stuart's Tablets after every meal to insure perfect digestion and avoid trouble.

But it is not generally known that the Tablets are just as good and wholesome for little folks as for their elders.

Little children who are pale, thin and have no appetite, or do not grow or thrive should use the Tablets after eating and will derive great benefit from them.

Mrs. G. A. Crosley, 68 Washington St., Hoboken, New Jersey, writes: "Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets just fill the bill for children as well as for older folks. I've had the best of luck with them. My three year-old girl takes them as readily as candy. I have only to say 'Tablets' and she drops everything else and runs for them."

A Buffalo mother, a short time ago, who despaired of the life of her babe, was so delighted with the results from giving the child Stuart's Tablets that she went before the notary public of Erie Co., N. Y., and made the following affidavit:

Gentlemen: Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets were recommended to me for my two months-old baby, which was sick and puny and the doctor said was suffering from indigestion. I took the child to the hospital, but there found no relief. A friend mentioned the Stuart Tablets and I procured a box from my druggist and used only the large box I bought—in the box and was delighted to find they were just the thing for my baby. I feel justified in saying that Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets saved my child's life.

MRS. W. T. DETHLOFF.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 11th day of April, 1907.

HENRY KARIS,
Notary Public in and for Erie Co., N. Y.

For babies, no matter how young or delicate, the tablets will accomplish wonders in increasing flesh, appetite and growth. Use only the large sweet tablets in every box. Full-sized boxes are sold by all druggists for 50 cents, and no parent should neglect the use of this safe remedy for all stomach and bowel troubles if the child is ailing in any way regarding its food or assimilation.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have been known for years as the best preparation for all stomach troubles whether in adults or infants.

JACK HARKAWAY'S SON

A Story of Stirring Adventure, Afloat and Ashore, of a Brave Boy

By CAPTAIN RICHARD RUDD, Author of "WHO KILLED GERALD BROWN?"

YESTERDAY we left our young hero, Jack Harkaway, in a very precarious condition, under arrest for the murder of Hunston's agent, who was the victim of Hunston himself. Everything pointed to Jack's guilt, and it seemed as though his arch-enemy had at last succeeded in making sure of his death.

CHAPTER XXXV.

A Contest for Life

JACK HARKAWAY was in jail, charged with murder.

His faith in his ability to prove his innocence was shaken.

Hunston had proven too clever for him.

Jack pondered over the situation as he paced the steel cage in which he was confined.

The man who had appeared in the captain's office and who had been identified as the janitor was assuredly not Hunston.

And yet, as Jack studied the face, every feature seemed to suggest Hunston.

He had heard of powerful drugs which change the appearance of those who take them so that they are unrecognizable by their friends.

Could Hunston have taken one of these, and thus rendered himself so much like a different person?

Or had the old man sent someone else to notify the police of the murder—some hireling of his whom he kept employed about the building?

The second explanation seemed the far more reasonable, yet neither offered any hope to Jack.

That afternoon he was to be brought before the magistrate.

He had no doubt that he would be eventually indicted, and probably tried and convicted.

The murder was an atrociously brutal one.

While a motive could not be established, Jack knew that the circumstantial evidence against him and Tony was such as to convict any one.

Clue to Hunston

As he was thinking the matter over a jailer appeared at his door, and without a word thrust a note into his hand.

Jack opened it wondering, and read it slowly.

It said:

"Have some one see D. Hungerford, —th street, the Bronx, at night, and ask him where Hunston is. It will be worth your while.

"A FRIEND."

Jack read the letter three times.

What bearing it had on his present predicament he could not imagine.

And yet, like a drowning man clutching at a straw, he was willing to seize anything that might possibly help him.

When Steel called a little later Jack showed him the note.

Steel was hurrying toward the Bronx in an automobile an hour later.

He had resolved to go to the address by day rather than wait for night, as the note directed.

It was taking a chance, but the case was urgent, and if he failed he could hurry to return later.

In the meantime Jack waited quietly in his cell.

Harvey called at the jail, but was not allowed to see him.

The jailers had been changed and the new man was not taking chances with a suspected murderer.

At 12 o'clock the hearing before the police magistrate was set.

The police had been busy all the morning collecting evidence.

They had, however, been unsuccessful in one important instance.

The janitor, who had given bail for his appearance as a witness, had again disappeared.

When the hour came for the hearing he did not materialize.

Every effort was made to find him, but without result.

At last the captain requested that the hearing be postponed until his witness could be found, and officers, armed with bench warrants, went in search of him.

Witness Found

Jack attached little importance to the note or its contents.

He had communicated with his uncle, and that gentleman, greatly distressed, had appeared at the police station with several lawyers.

They were admitted to see Jack, but he told them he thought it best to waive examination.

"I don't think anything but a trial will clear this up," he said, "and there are a good many things that must be settled before we go to trial. The best thing you can do is to appear for me and waive examination, then let the police take their witness before the grand jury when they find him."

The lawyers agreed to this, finding that there was very little hope of having Jack discharged.

But when they went in to see Tony they found him very differently disposed.

He was all for an immediate examination.

He did not want his people to believe that he was a murderer, even for a week.

After much deliberation and conference, Jack agreed to appear before the magistrate for examination.

As he was talking to one of the lawyers a jailer came in.

"The witness is here," he said.

"Then I suppose you are ready to take me into court," said Jack.

"Yes," said the jailer, "that is what I was sent here for."

Jack followed him into the dingy courtroom, and took his place in a line of minor offenders, a dirty, reeking crew, arrested for everything from plain drunkenness to arson.

As he entered the courtroom he saw the little janitor, still further changed in appearance by the addition of a very respectable suit of clothes.

A Lucky Find

His case was soon reached.

The policemen told of having found Jack and Tony and of discovering the corpse of Harper in the next room, horribly mutilated.

The little janitor told his story briefly.

He said he was cleaning up on the tenth floor when he heard a scream, and running to the door of the next room saw Jack and Tony beating Harper with an iron bar.

He did not wait to see more, he said, but hurried downstairs and notified the police.

He had seen no one else in the building.

"It is as I expected," said Jack, turning away in disgust. "Hunston has fixed things to suit himself. I guess he has got me this time."

The Judge cleared his throat and was about to speak when there was a tremendous commotion at the door.

Presently the crowd made way and Steel, breathless and without his hat, came running into the courtroom.

"Search that man!" he cried, pointing to the janitor, "search him!"

Two or three policemen seized Steel and would have violently ejected him, but the Judge stopped them.

"Hold the witness," he said, "he is trying to get away."

Jack looked at the janitor.

A great change had come over him. He had grown deadly pale and his body was quivering violently.

As Jack's eye fell upon him he was making a dive for the door, but mistaking it in panic, had plunged headlong into the lawyer's pen, where he was rounded up and seized by a couple of court officers.

Jack kept his eyes steadily on the fellow, and they presently widened with astonishment.

The beat form seemed to straighten up, the mass of wrinkles on the eyes and forehead to smooth out, the jaw to grow firm and the drooping mouth to regain the strength of youth.

And a moment later there stood before them not the wrinkled old janitor, but the powerfully-built and stern-faced Hunston, looking at least six inches taller, and changed into a different man.

"Now search him," said Steel, quietly, from his place between the policeman who had taken him in charge.

Hunston's face grew black with fury. He made one vain effort to escape, and then by effort unbent himself.

"It is only a fit, gentlemen," he said suavely. "I am subject to them. Search me if you like. You will find nothing compromising on me."

TO BE CONTINUED.

TO THE BOY READERS OF THE BOSTON AMERICAN:

SOMEWHERE in one of his essays Ralph Waldo Emerson, the sage of Concord, has said, "Discontent is the want of self-reliance."

Read that statement over again and see if you can understand what it means. Do you feel discontented? Does it seem to you that everything is going the wrong way? Do you think you are being unfairly located? Just stop a moment and think about it.

Are you sure it isn't your own fault? Are you quite certain that you yourself have not been to blame for it? Do you think you are not in the least to blame? Be honest about it, and if you find you have done wrong then make up your mind to do better and deserve better.

If you are quite sure that you have done your best, then see if you can do even better than your best. TRY TO BREAK YOUR OWN RECORD. Don't be discontented. Attend to your work and see if you can't improve it. Remember that if you don't go forward you must go backward.

RELY ON YOURSELF. Discontent means lack of self-control. Look up and not down. And do your work so that every night you can look back on the day and know it is better than the day before.

LABOR NEWS

ALLIED PRINTING TRADES UNION LABEL COUNCIL 96 BOSTON, MASS.

St. Louis has been chosen as the meeting place for next year's convention of the International Association of Machinists.

Although the convention at Faneuil Hall has come to a close, President O'Connell and the grand lodge officers will stay in this city at the Quincy House a few days longer to finish up business.

The delegates are returning to their homes enthusiastic over the reception accorded them by the local machinists' lodges. The convention adjourned a day later than was expected, owing to two adjournments being taken out of respect to the memory of Mayor Collins.

ROCKWELL BUSINESS AGENT.

A. W. Rockwell has been elected business agent of Machinists' Lodge No. 264 for the ensuing term of three months. Charles R. Sterling, who held the position of business agent for the past two years, declined a renomination.

The delegates to the International convention, which has just closed at Faneuil Hall, will make their reports at next Thursday night's meeting.

CIGARMAKERS MEET TO-NIGHT.

Cigarmakers' Union No. 97 holds a special meeting to-night at Paine Memorial Hall to nominate for the international referendum election of officers and to consider two amendments.

One of these concerns the by-laws, and provides for a local emergency fund maintained by an assessment of 10 cents, which shall not be permitted to fall below $75 in amount, and that whenever a member not entitled to death benefit, and who has no relatives or friends responsible for funeral expenses, shall die in the Boston jurisdiction, he will be buried by the union at an expense of $75. The union always buries not only any member of its own but often nonunion cigarmakers and friendless men of other trades.

Another proposed amendment is to the international constitution and was originally suggested by the Boston union. It is that "Cigarmakers or packers coming from a foreign country with a card less than one year old shall furnish proof that they sat at the bench not less than three years."

B. T. C. VERSUS BRICKLAYERS.

Two important communications from the Bricklayers Union will be considered at next Sunday's meeting of the Building Trades Council.

Officers will also be nominated. Jeremiah J. Donovan, who has been president of the council for several years, will not be a candidate for re-election.

WHOLE WORLD OF SPORTS COVERED FOR THE BOSTON AMERICAN BY ITS CORPS OF EXPERTS

HARNESS HORSE STARS WILL TRY FOR RECORDS

Audubon Boy, one of the kings of pacers, and Sweet Marie, the Belting queen of the season, will to-day endeavor to lower their records of 2:00¼ and 2:04¾, respectively, at the historic Readville track.

Not since the day Dan Patch made his phenomenal record has interest been so great in a trial against time as it is in the attempts of this horse and mare to lower their own marks this afternoon. It is likely that one of the biggest gatherings of horsemen that has attended the track at the foot of the beautiful Blue Hills in years will be on hand to witness the exhibitions against the watch this afternoon.

Neither one of these fleet footed horses has yet appeared in the full measure of its speed, but if the weather man is generous in his attempts to get the sun goods to-day, with still and warm air, both will be seconds nearer it at 4 o'clock than they were when Old Sol put in appearance over the Eastern mountain this morning. Their performances of last week leave no doubt of this.

A special race train will leave the South Terminal at 1:30 o'clock and will run on the grand stand, returning after the races.

HARVARD SQUAD MAY DEVELOP CRACK PUNTERS

Bill Reid evidently intends to have a Harvard eleven this year that can play a kicking game.

Up to yesterday he had done little with his men except to practice tackling and the pigskin, fall on it when it was not caught, and to actually kick it. Yesterday he went one step farther and taught his big gang second consideration, how to protect their punter when he was getting his punt off. Another department of the kicking game that has been worked on hard by some of the candidates on the team is that of getting down the field under the punts. Peter Bowditch has been coaching the candidates for end in this work with the result of a noticeable improvement on the part of most of the candidates.

It looks as though Harvard would have some good punters this season. Hanley, Brill, Foster, Lockwood, Leonard and Hall have all shown possibilities this week and get into the ball every time in good style and getting good height and distance to their punts.

Lincoln, Wendell, Hanley, Foster and Starr are getting to be fairly sure in their judgment and handling of the punts.

The work yesterday followed the routine of the week. Coach Lewis was assisted in his work this afternoon by Andy Bourbon Wilkes, J. Y. Gatcomb, Concord, N. H. Merchant, b. m., Sweet Marie, br. m., by McKinney-Lady Rivers, by Mambrino, A. P. McDonald, Albany, N. Y.

ASHLEY MEETS DESHLER NEXT MONDAY NIGHT

The bouts scheduled for Webster for next Monday night between Dave Deshler and George Ashley and between Johnny Lynch and Kid Paull have been postponed a week to give the contestants opportunity of getting into best condition. The main segment of the Charlestown-Hamilton engagement will decide to-night. The first show a screamer, and feel that all in arrears will be better conserved by taking sufficient time in the arrangement.

George Ashley is fighting fifteen rounds a day with leather flay and the balance of the camp, and Kid Paull is training under the same roofpee.

Dave Deshler and Johnny Lynch are working out in Cambridge, and the claim of the latter's managers is that the patrons of the Webster club with the name that sounds like half a dozen broken eggs will turn somersaults in their seats before the scheduled twenty-five rounds of honest effort are reeled off inside the ropes.

NINE AUTOS WILL START IN RACE

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—Nine machines and their drivers are ready for the 113-mile race over the picturesque roads of Nassau County, L. I., to select a team of five to represent America in the first international team automobile contest for the Vanderbilt cup. The race will be started from a point near Mineola at 8 o'clock this morning and whether the day be fine or disagreeable a half-mile circuit is to be run for there is quite as much rivalry among the American contestants as there will be later on in the international race over the same course.

For the races the candidates for the American team have had their cars on the course for a week, but the final practice machines are thoroughly tuned up and their drivers have learned the peculiarities of the course.

The other three entrants, the Premier and the two Matheusons, have not arrived at the starting line. The Premier, it is understood, is over weight and cannot compete. The Matheusons are expected to be on hand to-day.

That the contestants are ready is shown by the fact that but four machines took advantage of the fine weather yesterday to make trial runs. The four cars were driven by Walter Christie, Frank Nutt, Louis Strang and Joe Tracy.

The members of the committee in charge of the race have been pretty busy for the four days over the weather outlook, and the various cars were hustling to get into shedding hands and other attachments to make the machines easier to control, but the fine weather yesterday cheered them up immensely, and everything in the cars will be weighted. The scorers of the scales will be stationed at the finish, and the cars' weights to the amount of 2,204 pounds, which is the limit, and the necessary deductions or additions will be made on this basis.

HUNTINGTON AVENUE GROUNDS, Boston, Sept. 22.—Several thousand base ball fans crowded a hurry-up lunch and hustled up to the links this afternoon to take in the double-header between the Champs and the Browns. Double-headers begin at 1:45 these days, so it behooves the enthusiasts to get a move on to see the start of the fun.

The great race for third place is closer than ever to-day. The result of yesterday's games bunched the four teams so that a shaker could reach them all. If Chicago should happen to win both games to-day and then Philly could play one game Collins and his men will be in third place for the first time this year.

The veteran Harry Howell and Jack Powell, the former New York player, were the men selected by Manager McAleer to see that the Boston club got into the game. The last time Howell faced the Champs in this city he made them look very small from a batting standpoint. They may do better to-day. Powell was never much of a puzzle for any one, but Collins promised to send Winter and Tannehill in the rubber in the hope of performing in the first game. Winter has been pitching great ball lately and Tannehill can always be depended upon. The weather was delightful.

ECONOMY TESTS FOR AUTOMOBILES

Special to the Boston American.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—Announcement is made of the conditions to cover the six day economy test for automobiles to be promoted by the New York Motor Club October 23 to 28. The objects of the test are plainly set forth to demonstrate how economically persons may be transported between given points in motor vehicles.

There are to be five classes of the contestants according to selling prices of contesting machines, as follows: Class A, for cars not exceeding $750; class B, for cars in excess of $750 and not exceeding $1,500; class C, for cars from $1,500 to $2,250; class D, for cars from $2,250 to $3,500; class E, for cars exceeding $3,500 in selling price. To insure the proper classification of cars the manufacturers will be required to accept orders for duplicate cars at the entered prices.

The dates and distances of the daily runs are given as follows: October 23, York to Philadelphia, 90 miles; October 24, Philadelphia to New York, 90 miles; October 25, New York to Albany, 150 miles; October 26, Albany to New York, 150 miles; October 27, New York to Southampton, L. I., 101 miles; October 28, Southampton to New York, 101 miles. Total distance, 882 miles.

The basis of the charges for purposes of comparison and award are to be made on the following railroad fares per passenger: New York to Philadelphia and return, $4.50; New York to Albany and return, $6; New York to Southampton and return, $4.53. Total per passenger, $14.53.

Gasolene and lubricants are to be charged for at current rates, and supplies may be taken on only in the presence of official observers. Repairs are to be charged for at the rate per hour to be determined. Driver charges will be made if repairs and adjustments be made by any other than the driver of a competing car.

The route to Philadelphia and return will be via Staten Island, Perth Amboy, New Brunswick and Trenton, that to Albany and back will be along the regular Hudson River roads through Peekskill and Poughkeepsie. A south shore route will be followed to Southampton, and a north shore route from Southampton to Hampton.

Both the Philadelphia and Southampton runs competing machines may start between 8 and 10 o'clock in the morning and may finish between 3 and 5 o'clock in the afternoon. In the Albany runs the starts will be between 7 and 9 in the morning and the finishes between 5 and 10 in the evening. No contesting vehicle, however, will be permitted to exceed the speed limit.

An unusual rule, the operation of which will be watched with interest, is that no competing car shall pass another on the road without the consent of the observers on both machines. The object of this is to prevent speeding.

RUBBER GAME TO-MORROW.

The East Bostons will play the rubber game against the Highlands of Chelsea tomorrow at Wood Island Park at 3 p. m. The first game was won by East Boston 5-3; the second game went to the Highlands 5-4. To-morrow Coffin and Waldeigh and Edwards and Keliher will be the batteries.

THREE "HEAVIES" RETURN TO YALE FOR PRACTICE

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 22.—Arthur Erwin, "Don" McKay and "Phil" Smith, three of the heavyweights of the second eleven of last fall, arrived at Yale for the preliminary football practice. Erwin weighs 210 pounds. Before he had been in town an hour the coaches had him over at the "gym" for passing the ball to Dives, last year's freshman quarterback. "Don" McKay, the husky pitcher, has had four years of varsity baseball and cannot play against Harvard this fall, but Phil Smith, second baseman, Foster, Sanford, the old Yale center and former Cornell coach, will be on hand to-day to help the team.

Two elevens were selected for the first signal drill of the season. The elevens were made up as follows:

EVERETT VS. SOMERVILLE.

Everett and Somerville will clash tomorrow afternoon at Broadway Field in their last and deciding game for the championship of both cities. Coffin, the former High School star, will be the officiating club artist for Everett, while Cassell will do the firing act for the Somerville organization. The game will be called promptly at 3:30 by "Don" Riley, who is to be the arbitrator.

TRIPLE TIE IN EASTERN LEAGUE

Special to the Boston American.

PROVIDENCE, Sept. 22.—There is now a triple tie for first place in the Eastern league. Providence, Baltimore and Jersey City brought about this condition of affairs by their victories yesterday.

The locals took the Bisons into camp for the third time running. Kellum's work made the eighth straight for them on the home grounds.

Providence has five more games to play and all taking place to-day, against Rochester. Jersey City and Baltimore have only three apiece to play, thereby giving Chairman Bigg's a decided advantage. Baltimore will meet the Montreals, and should have a cinch, while the Skeeters will be battling the Buffalo team.

GANS CAN'T MEET "TWIN"

BALTIMORE, Sept. 22.—Manager Al Herford received a telegram from the Hayes Valley Athletic Club, San Francisco, yesterday offering Joe Gans a return match with Mike (Twin) Sullivan in ten rounds. Manager Al said: "Gans and myself are as anxious as can be for another bout with Sullivan, but it is impossible to accept this offer. Gans is not in condition to fight immediately and to meet as tough a man as Sullivan he ought to have at least one week of genuine training. So we cannot accept the offer."

HOWARDS WANT GAME.

The Howards of Charlestown would like to hear from some strong team for to-morrow. Will give full expenses. Address E. J. Murphy, 18 Fremont street, Boston, or telephone to 5296 Main between 9 and 5 o'clock.

BROOKLYN 10, SYRACUSE 5.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 22.—The Brooklyn nationals easily defeated a patched up Syracuse state league team here, 6 to 5.

Julian Hawthorne, the noted writer, continues his articles on muscular development in next SUNDAY'S BOSTON AMERICAN. These articles are attracting wide attention. Be sure and read next Sunday's instalment.

Between the Innings.

Two wins to-day will even up matters.

Buchanan appeared to have nothing but a wide outshoot, still the Champs could not touch him.

* * *

Gilleon established a record yesterday. Two hits in one game. Who'd ever thought such a thing possible.

* * *

The youngsters, Godwin and Rising, did well in the field but with the willow they appeared woefully weak. However, they may pan out as wallops.

* * *

If yesterday's game should ever happen to be staged the programme is likely to read like this: James Collins and James Dickey, pitcher; Connolly and Lake.

* * *

Buster is not putting up the fine article of ball he displayed when he first adorned a Champ's uniform. He is a glutton for punishment, however, and is sure to give a good account of himself with a little more experience.

* * *

Umpire Sheridan should announce the batteries. It is probable that one half the spectators didn't know the visiting pitcher and catcher.

* * *

Chick Stahl's running catch of Buchanan's long soarer in the second inning was a beaut. It looked like a three-bagger, but Chick made a one-handed stab that brought the fans to their feet.

* * *

It was the first game of the season in which Jesse Burkett warmed the bench. At Selkach, who also watched the game from the bench, was as anxious to get into the fray that on several occasions he rushed to the coaching lines when a coacher was on duty. Sel is one of the hardest workers on the team.

* * *

Harris, the youngster secured from Fall River, was out with the players yesterday. He looks like a promising twirler. He warmed up with the preliminary practice with the rest of the pitchers and gave an exhibition of his assortment.

* * *

When Gilleon made that two-base swat the sixth inning everybody, including himself, nearly dropped dead from heart trouble. And to think that he followed with a smacking single the very next time up.

* * *

Ferris is a mighty fine pitcher with a wide outcurve. Hobe titles at them like that after a piece of dough. Step up and meet them, Hobe, and you'll have better luck. Don't wait for them to break.

* * *

Flynn is in the same class as Browne and Rhoades when it comes to base running. He scampered around the bases at a tempestuous clip when he cracked out that three-bagger in the fifth.

* * *

Buchanan fanned four men throughout the nine innings. Three of these strikeouts recorded to him came in the fifth period, when Rising, Ferris and Armbruster went out in one, two, three order. Every ball Buchanan put up was nothing but a wide outcurve, too.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 22.—Tenney's Boston National team will open here to-day for a series of three games.

These games in the West terminate the season for the Hub aggregation.

Fred Tenney and his warriors seem quite satisfied with life now that they have put the kibosh on the Brooklynites, practically insuring their finishing the season better than tail-enders. For a thing it looked as though the Boston outfit would ring up in the race, but their great showing against the Superbas, whom they beat three times and tied once, precluded them from taking the leather medal.

As it is, they may finish just as high in the race as their rivals, the Champs. The latter may yet finish in sixth place, as the Tenneyites, if they hustle along, even do as well.

The managers of the rival teams are by undecided as to their pitchers to-

E. Willis will probably do the pitching for Boston. If he's in the mood he will overthrow the local team.

Jimmy Robison figures on sending in an to the rubber. He is in good pri mond should be a worthy rival of the and of Willis.

DAN PATCH CREATES NEW PACING MARK

ALLENTOWN, Pa., Sept. 22.—Records were broken in the races at the Allentown Fair.

Dan Patch, paced by two runners and with H. C. Hersey driving, went a mile in 2:01. The quarters were made in 30½, 30, 30 and 30½. An hour later Dan Patch, hitched to a road wagon, cut the paced record of his sire, Joe Patchen, from 2:11¾ to 2:05. The quarters were made in 31, 32, 32 and 30. This beats world's pacing record for half mile track.

"CORBETT" TO FIGHT ERNE HERE SEPT. 28

Manager William L. Crowley of the New Douglas A. C. announces that the club will open to members on Thursday, September 28, with Young "Corbett" and Young Erne of Philadelphia in the main bout for fifteen rounds. There has been a big change in the club all around, and Jim Mcbevitt of Chelsea is now the club big wheel. Tom Power and Jack Leonard being silent partners.

DREYFUSS WILL PROTEST GAMES

PITTSBURG, Sept. 22.—Barney Dreyfuss is dying hard. He refuses to believe that New York has won the pennant of this year and, it would seem, still has faith in the ability of his boys to pull out.

This afternoon he announced his intention of taking one game from New York's credit column if possible. He has about decided to protest the game won by New York from Philadelphia last Tuesday on the ground that Lush, while still an outlaw player, was used by Hugh Duffy in the game. Tuesday last in Philadelphia. Manager Duffy sent Johnny Lush to the bat in place of one of his pitchers in the contest which New York won. Since then the national commission has notified the Philadelphia club that Lush is ineligible to take part in games between clubs operating under the National Agreement, and that the Quaker management erred when it permitted the former member of the Williamsport club to take part in the game.

Dreyfuss said this afternoon: "I do not like to try to win championships on technicalities, but I guess I will ask to have the game in question declared null and void on the ground that New York defeated the Quakers when the latter used a player who had just come from the outlaw league and was ineligible to take part in a championship contest. If we lose on account of this appeal, but we will have a little fun, just the same."

GARDNER TIED WITH SMITH

In the national golf tourney now being held at Myopia play will start this morning at 9:30. It is expected that a low-down score as high as 310 will be made. All players who were 176 or over have been cut out.

It looks as though there would be a great struggle for first place to-day, as Alex Smith and Stewart Gardner are tied for first place with 156, while Arthur Smith, Gilbert, Nichols and Alex Campbell are all close-in the running, with 158.

The best score of yesterday was made by Joe Lloyd of Essex County who returned a card of seventy-five.

Ten Commandments for Engaged Young Women

1—Don't show that you are too pleased.
2—Don't be too affectionate.
3—Don't try to show off your power over your fiance.
4—Don't make too many demands upon your fiance.
5—Don't be jealous and catty.

By Dorothy Dix

The Fifth Commandment for the engaged girl is this:

Don't be jealous and catty.

EVERY woman in love is jealous—it's unspoiled. If she could she would force of the man of her affections to wear blinders so that he could look neither to the right nor the left, but only straight in front, and she would take precious good care that she blocked the view in that direction with her own person and charms.

This precautionary measure being impossible, her fears take the form of turning a suspicious eye on every other woman who dawns on the horizon, and trying to prejudice the man against her—as if any man ever was warned of danger that approached him in feminine form!

During the time of the engagement this distrust of her sister woman becomes so acute that it amounts to a positive mania with the majority of girls.

They scent a rival in every woman who looks at their fiances. They see a deep-laid plot to rob them of their heart's beloved in a woman saying a plain "good morning" to the adored Adolphus Gustavus.

They are ready to tear out the eyes and scratch off the pompadour of every girl who is rash enough to attempt to talk to him about the weather. It is a time when a girl is jealous of a man's grandmother.

Hurts the Girl

AND this without reference to the man. He may be so homely and insignificant that no other woman on the face of the earth would have him, or he may be so saturated with affection for the girl to whom he is betrothed that all other women are temporarily non-existent. It doesn't alter the girl's feeling that her only safety lies in always being first in the mind of, honestop on the lookout for a rival.

Nothing could be more foolish or more injurious to her own interests than this attitude. To begin with, it is a needless torture that the girl who indulges in it inflicts upon herself, for jealousy is a two-edged sword that cuts deeper into the hand that wields it than it does into the person against whom it is directed.

Then it destroys the girl's charm. There is nothing more repulsive than a woman in a jealous rage.

A pea-green mental complexion is not one whit more becoming than a physical one would be, and there is nothing attractive in the appearance of a girl who looks as if she could bite a tenpenny nail in two every time the man to whom she is engaged shows some slight and innocent attention to another woman, or who frowns up into a perfect glacier whenever she observes her fiance engaged in an animated conversation with a girl friend.

She May Lose Him

YET we see girls act in this manner every day. We all know girls who go off and pout and sulk if their fiance asks another girl to dance with him at a party; who watch him so closely if he is playing a game of cards that they can't remember what is trumps; who grow sarcastic and positively insulting if he dares to act like a gentleman and show that he is entertained and interested in the woman he has taken down to dinner.

And all of us, watching the thundercloud of jealousy and temper gathering in the young woman's face, have thought how the poor fellow would catch it as soon as she got him by himself, and we wondered that he didn't duck and run from her while there was yet time.

There are many reasons why an engaged girl should not give way to jealousy, not the least of which is that she depreciates herself in the eyes of her betrothed when she shows that she has no confidence in holding that which she has won.

Men don't know much about women, and they are very apt to take a woman at her own valuation.

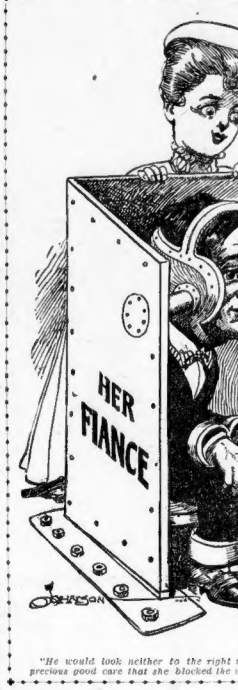
Have Confidence

THEREFORE, when they see one that is so morally afraid of the attractions of every other woman, they naturally begin to think that perhaps other women are superior.

Certainly a girl has a very poor opinion of her own beauty and intelligence, and charm, when she dares not let her sweetheart speak to or look at another girl for fear of losing him.

Instead of fearing comparison with other women, she should court it with the calm assurance that the thing a man picked out he prefers, and that while there may be other women better looking, cleverer, or more fascinating, she represents his taste, and the one who suits him best.

Moreover, this is the quintessence of the folly of jealousy—you can never escape the cause.



"He would look neither to the right nor to the left, but only straight in front, and she would take precious good care that she blocked the view in that direction with her own person and charms."

Dorothy Dix Says Jealousy Is as Unpleasant to Her Fiance as It Is to Everyone Else Who Notices It

You cannot keep a man under a tea-cup, and there will always be plenty of pretty women, so a girl had just as well get that fact at last, make up her mind that she isn't going to worry over what she can't help.

She sees not such fools as they sometimes seem to women, and they get these speeches down to pure envy and jealousy and cattishness, and no girl could lower herself more in her fiance's estimation than by displaying to him such a disposition to wield the claws.

Don't be jealous, girls. You can't protect yourself against your rivals by floods of tears and bitter reproaches and harrowing scenes, and you do not make yourself any more attractive and desirable to your fiance by causing him to feel like a whipped cur, because he has to lie and sneak out of it every time he is civil to an old woman acquaintance and you find it out.

Be game. Think that you are just as attractive as any other woman, and don't be afraid to measure charm with her. Jealousy will do you no good in holding a man's love, but confidence will.

"CONVICT 99,"

Synopsis.

LAURENCE CRAIG, once a poor Lowell mill hand, but now the trusted confidential employe of Christopher Lucas, the rich London merchant, told beautiful Geraldine Lucas of his love on the night of the ball at Fenton Court. A typical young Irish-American, whose own pluck and perseverance carried him to the front, he was a man who might stir the heart of any woman.

The next evening, when he called to learn his fate, he read the secret in her eyes and told the story of his boyhood life in the Massachusetts mill town. With the blessing of Mr. Lucas, and the rich merchant's promise to make him junior partner in the firm, the young man left Fenton Court with a light heart, almost too joyful to believe that it was not all a sort of Arabian Nights' Tale, that would fade with the morning.

He thought ever his whole life of hard labor and struggling to reach the top, and remembered the little Larry Craig, who played on the banks of the Merrimac. He could hardly believe that Laurence Craig, successful in business and successful in love, could be the same little lad whose father had been driven into exile because of his patriotism. But Irish blood and American pluck had won the battle.

And he looked up at the stars over the northern lights of London and was very happy.

But his bright dream of the happy future was suddenly broken when two detectives armed with revolvers forced him to accompany them to the nearest police station, where bewail placed under arrest on the charge of having murdered Charles Kesteven, an accountant, who had been examining the books of Christopher Lucas & Co., and had discovered that some one had embezzled hundreds of pounds and made false entries to cover up the thefts.

At his trial witnesses showed that Laurence had been in the same train with Kesteven, and the accountant had been found murdered alongside the railroad track morning after the ball at Fenton Court, of which Laurence had declared his love for beautiful Geraldine Lucas.

The knife with which Kesteven had been killed was taken from Craig's desk in his office, where it had been used as a paper knife, and, in fact, the whole web of circumstantial evidence had been so closely woven about him that every one in the courtroom regarded him as doomed to the scaffold.

A fragment of the murdered man's necktie found in Craig's overcoat pocket when he was arrested served to clinch the matter, and everything pointed to his having taken the knife with which the crime was committed and deliberately murdered the accountant to keep him from discovering defalcations of which the prisoner had been guilty. Even Mr. Lucas was forced to admit that he believed Laurence Craig had stolen from the man whose daughter he was to marry and who had promised to make him a partner in his business.

The evidence of Ralph Vickers skillfully constructed a false alibi for himself and wove the meshes tightly about Craig although he was careful not to let his act mostly appear, for he knew that Geraldine Lucas, who was in court, would resent anything that might seem to intentionally injure the man she loved.

There could be but one result, and Laurence Craig, freeborn and innocent, was condemned to the scaffold and taken to Newgate to await his legal death.

Geraldine proved her love by visiting him, and assurance of her regard helped him to face his approaching fate.

"WE are assured by the prisoner's counsel that the Judge, whose son Kesteven was the accused man to the gallows, is himself no longer convinced that the guilt is so strong as it appeared to him at the trial. The opposing hypothesis was not adequately presented by the counsel for the defense.

"It is terrible to think of the possibility of that hypothesis being correct. Life is a sacred thing, and the thought of sending a man well shudder at the thought of sending to the gallows one who is not only innocent, but who is probably the only witness by whom the guilty may be brought home to the actual murderer."

Time for Respite

Ralph Vickers drew a deep gasping breath. He could not dared to read further.

"The sand in the glass is rapidly running out. But there is yet time for the Prime Minister to stay the hand of justice for at least another week to give opportunity of full and complete sifting the evidence.

"Let the Home Secretary hear the American Minister and listen to the story of the condemned man himself. Let him carefully read the bloody knife and the exact position of the fatal weapon from the office of Mr. Christopher Lucas, the spot on the floor where and by whom that knife was sharpened for the bloody work.

"Let him assure himself that at Gospel Oak station, on the night of the murder, no person or persons other than the condemned man entered the compartment in which Charles Kesteven met his death. Above all, let the Home Secretary investigate the supposed motive of his crime, and determine whether the defalcations discovered by the deceased accountant were the defalcations of Laurence Craig alone.

Vickers, seeing how closely the confessions of the newspaper writer approached the actual truth, clenched his long hands in impotent misgiving and wrath.

What business had these journalists to meddle with the affair, to stir up doubts, to incite people to further search? The trial was over, the sentence pronounced; why couldn't they leave their prey alone and let the law take its course? It was only another fetishism to be hanged. Why couldn't they forget that hated man—at this point Vickers ground his teeth—who was waiting for him and far enough out of their sight?

The sand in the glass was quite near zero. What, if this agitation should bring about a reprieve?

The thought appalled him. He grew deadly pale and ran his fingers nervously through his black hair. If Craig should remain alive, his own secret guilt might at any time be revealed to the world. He started and gazed at the door, as if even at that moment the officials of the Secretary of the law should enter the office where he sat and demand his secret.

CHAPTER VII.

A Message of Life

IT was on the forenoon of a Sunday that the welcome news reached Laurence Craig. On the previous night he had faintly heard from a distance the grat preparations of the carpenters in the shed where the awful scaffold was to be erected. Terrible though the sound was it did not lessen his courage. Already his heart's life was over. Why, then, should he dread the mere passing of life from the body?

His feelings as he sat in the chapel on the Sunday morning were those of brave passivation. The silent address of the prison chaplain brought him crowning glory and peace. Never had he prayed more fervently, never had the Christ whereunto he had joined in it appealed to him with more sacred meaning than on this day that he believed would be last on earth.

Calm still, he returned to his cell. But scarcely had he entered when his door was flung open and the governor of the prison came in, followed by the chaplain. They came to inform him that he was not to die.

He heard them blankly at first, doubting still. When at last the glad truth dawned on his brain he gave a cry of thanksgiving.

The shadows that had closed about him vanished, and in their place a rush of glorious light flooded his soul.

Life was his again. He made a thousand times dearer by the near risk of its loss.

For a few moments he imagined that he was to be restored to liberty also. But soon he realized that the commutation of his sentence still meant that he was to spend the rest of his days as a miserable convict in penal servitude.

Thanks to the intercession of the American Minister, his life had been spared, but after all, what was life worth if it must be passed in an English prison? After twenty years of it he would be scarcely like the handsome young Irishman who had won the hand of Geraldine Lucas.

Prison for Life

For twenty years—he felt that clemency might come there—for twenty long and bitter years he was to be a prisoner, exiled from the world as surely as if he were on a desert island. Twenty years of dismal associates than brutal criminals and harsh prison officials; with no other home than the bare white walls of his cell. Oh, how could he live through all that weary time? He would be almost an old man in twenty years.

And Geraldine—would she wait for him? Would she be true to him all that time? As no, he dared not think of her in that way now. Before, when the sombre shadow of death hung over him, he hoped to meet her again in the bright world beyond the grave.

But in twenty years? What would he be then? A degraded man with the marks of his terrible servitude upon him, soiled, bent by unfitness for companionship with criminals whose imprisonment was the just punishment for the evil work they had done—men who were in many cases little above the beasts.

Not long did Laurence Craig receive the temporary leniency that is accorded a condemned man. On the following morning—the Monday morning—he was taken from his cell and marched with other convicts to the prison bath.

There, in the presence of warders and prisoners, he was ordered to strip and wash himself in a large tank of hot over-clean water. His own clothes of freedom were then forfeited, and in their place he was supplied with a coarse, blue striped shirt, a rough grey sheep jacket, breeches and vest and a greasy little cap, a pair of darned stockings and thick shoes.

Is Degraded

He thanked God that Geraldine could not see him in this hideous guise. But later on he was destined to feel more degrading process. An evil-looking prison orderly came into his cell and at once proceeded to cut off the hair of the prisoner, which Laurence had held sacred.

His long, black locks were clipped, and clipped with a pair of clumsy shears, until they were not a hair's length from his head that he could take hold of.

Then, shorn and clothed as a convict, he felt his degradation complete. But there was more to follow. Every morning he was obliged to go down on his knees in his cell and with two hard brushes polish the asphalt floor. Already it so shone that he could almost see his face in it.

Then his copper wash basin and tin utensils, his table, stool and, indeed, every article in his cell had also to be scoured or polished by him. Spotless cleanliness is one of the prime regulations of an English prison.

After a breakfast of bread and gruel, some pieces of tarred rope were thrown in to him, together with an instrument called by the prisoners a "Spike," consisting of a nail and a piece of cord. With the aid of this instrument he was required to unravel the strands of the rope, and by his fingers reduce them to what is everywhere known as oakum.

The Prison Van

Four pounds of oakum is the quantity demanded of each healthy prisoner as a day's work. But it was not for many days that Laurence succeeded in his task. The rope was as hard as wood, and his fingers, since the old working days in the factory, had become soft and unaccustomed to labor.

In that cold and comfortless cell, and with his mind still terribly oppressed, his first days of durance passed like long weeks. Already he was beginning to feel the awful monotony of prison life—the work, the exercise in the high-walled yard, the morning visits of the governor, the fussy officialism, the food, never varied.

As to the food itself, Laurence got little of it. It was not appetizing. For breakfast, the nauseous skilly and dry bread; for dinner a few soapy potatoes and two or three ounces of ill-cooked meat, or some mide of the liquor the meat had been boiled in the day before; for supper cocoa and bread, this was the unvarying fare.

Laurence was among the first of the prisoners that session to be drafted off to a convict station. Handcuffed, he was conducted to the dismal prison van, pushed into a narrow compartment, and there locked in. The Black Maria was driven off through the noisy streets, he knew not whither.

His neighbors on either side of him kept up a lively conversation throughout the journey. They were evidently old birds.

"Wot cheer, Darkie?" began one.

"Ello, Nipper! Yer there, eh? Where are we barred for this journey—the Scrubs?"

"Ay, I reckon that's the crib. 'Tain't such a dusty place. I'd sooner be in there than at the Oak, any day. Wonder Larry one o' the screws at the Scrubs, don't yer know? I'm as wore at Wandsworth last time me and you done a laggin' together. Wot's yer lot this time, mate?"

At Wormwood Scrubs

"Two years 'ard."

"Oh, that'll soon pass. Mine's five stretches. But the cove wot's between us, 'e's a lifer, eh's 'e?"

"Ay, it's 'im as done that little job at Gospel Oak."

"Serves the bloomin' Yank jolly well right. Prison's were the 'ole bloomin' lot of 'em ought to be."

"Ay, there's on many of 'em in Lunnon now as a cove carn't git 'alf a chance to make an honest livin' in 'is own town."

Laurence did not understand the prison slang these men used, but he gathered that the destination was Wormwood Scrubs Prisons, and so it proved to be.

On entering the prison gates he was relieved of his handcuffs.

Before the full particulars of his name, weight, measurements, case and sentence were examined and recorded.

After the customary bath he was furnished with other clothes of a yet more distinctly convict type than those worn at Newgate, and a circular badge that was sewn upon his left sleeve bore the letter "E," indicating the year, and the number "99," by which distinctive number he was afterwards to be known, his name being sunk.

Hints on Health and Beauty

By the Professor

DEAR PROFESSOR:

My complaint is a terribly red face and I want a remedy through you, who have done so much for the young women of New England through your column in the AMERICAN. I feel sure that you will be able to help me. All the blood in my body seems to rush to my face when I meet or talk with a man, and whenever I get excited over anything it is the same way. I am ashamed to be out in company half the time on this account. My complexion is fair, and while I am not over fleshy I am inclined that way.

MINNIE W.

YOU are too full blooded and your blood courses too freely through your veins. The best I can do for you is to give you a few simple remedies for moderating the circulation.

First, I want to warn you that you allow yourself to work up into nervous expectancy of a recurrence of your trouble. You have come to expect trouble, and you get it. So it is of prime importance that you try to overcome the habit by keeping your nerves as calm as possible. Of course, I realize that this is easier said than done, but it can be done, and you must do it or keep on suffering, for no number of remedies is going to do you any good unless you accompany them with considerable mental effort. A powerful lot can be accomplished by one's making up her mind to do it—that is a man, and whenever I get excited over anything it is the same way. I am ashamed to be out in company half the time on this account. My complexion is fair, and while I am not over fleshy I am inclined that way.

In the first place, look to your belts and shoes and your corsets. If they are tight, loosen them and give your blood a chance to distribute itself normally over your whole body. And your gloves, too, should be looked after. Never wear tight gloves.

With all the ingenuity of the fashion makers nothing has yet been devised that will cramp a woman's face. With most people the part of their bodies cramped, it is a wonder that there are not more redfaced women. Thank heaven the fashion does not decree that we shall wear gloves on our noses, chins and ears.

For my part I would just as soon see them discarded from our hands and by nature take its course in that which should be the most beautiful part of every woman's body. So if you must wear gloves, let them not be tight.

I advise you to take a rapid bath each day, and frequently in the course of it let cold water run out of the faucet over your wrists. As big arteries run through the wrists near the surface, that is the quickest and most convenient way to cool the blood. Wherever you feel that blood is about to rush to your head do this.

Each morning wet a towel with tepid water and hold it to the back of your neck for ten minutes.

It is more than probable that your blood is too thick, and that blood-cooling and thinning drinks will be beneficial. Such drinks are sassafras tea and phosphates. Avoid eating sweets of any kind or fat meats.

An Attractive Frock for a Girl

No. 2,926—The first thought of the busy housewife is to see that her young people are beautifully clothed, and the attractive designs for children all her well with delight. The illustration shows a pretty dress for a little girl that can be developed without lace or embroidery into a generally useful dress, or if desired, the panel portion of the yoke can be trimmed so as to give the frock a very Cossack appearance. The three tucks on skirt, waist and sleeves are a stylish touch to the frock, which can also be finished with round neck and elbow puff sleeves. For a medium size this pattern requires 5¼ yards of 36-inch material.

Pattern No. 2,926 is in five sizes, 6 to 14 years.

FRIENDS CHEER MISSIONARIES WHO SAIL AWAY

Twenty-one Leave on Arabic For England on Way to India.

SPED BY SONG AND PRAYER

Amid the singing of psalms, the cheers of their friends and co-workers and cries of "God be with you" and "Heaven preserve you," the big steamship Arabic of the White Star line swung out into the stream, carrying twenty-one missionaries on their way to India under the auspices of the American Baptist Missionaries' Union.

The party will spend four days in Liverpool and then sail for Madras, Rangoon and Calcutta, and from there will plunge into the interior of the country to carry the word of God to the heathen.

If outward appearances are any indication of feeling, then it was a happy lot that sailed on the Arabic. Everybody was in the best of spirits, all were smiling faces, and their relatives and friends, upon whose faces many of them may never look again, apparently impressed by their sacred duty, seemed willing to let them go.

"God save you."

"The Lord be with you."

"Heaven preserve you."

These were some of the expressions heard on the deck of the Arabic during the farewells, while the minds of others were apparently concerned with more material considerations, as injunctions were given about the care of "Tabby," and "Fido," and the feeding of the canary. Altogether it was a very happy throng.

Farewell services were held on the deck of the Arabic for an hour previous to sailing. Rev. M. G. Adams, D. D., of Cambridge, led off with prayer and Rev. F. S. Dobbins, D. D., of Philadelphia, led the singing.

285 FINED FOR BAD MILK SALES

A total of 320 convictions for keeping or selling impure or adulterated milk, cream, butter and vinegar is the record of the local bureau of milk inspection during the last fiscal year. The bureau is under the direction of Inspector James O. Jordan. The convictions netted $6,100 in fines. During the year, 285 milk dealers were haled into court on this charge, and with scarcely an exception fines were imposed. For the first time on record, four dealers were fined for using sodium benzoate in cream as a preservative. Among the other adulterants used were formaldehyde, borax, and annatto coloring matter. Thirteen adulterated vinegar, the same number adulterated butter, and twenty-one oleomargarine cases were prosecuted successfully.

WEALTHY MAN KILLED BY TRAIN

R. Ashton Lawrence, of No. 384 Beacon street, Newton, a wealthy resident of that city, was instantly killed by falling between two cars while trying to board a moving train at the Chestnut Hill station of the Boston & Albany railroad.

The train was moving fast when Lawrence started to run for it. It is thought that he miscalculated the distance between the station platform and the car steps. He managed to get one hand on the rail, but lost his footing and was dragged several feet until, unable to retain his grasp longer, he fell to the tracks, striking on the back of his head. Death was due to a compound fracture of the skull.

Lawrence was regarded as one of the wealthiest residents of the city. He is survived only by a wife.

The Coming Coal Strike—An Educator

It Will MAKE Workmen See That the Strike Is Out of Date, and That the Man Who Does Not Know Enough to Fight With HIS BALLOT Will Have to LEARN

The big coal strike is coming—sooner or later—and the coal mine "owners" are ready.

They propose to refuse recognition of the union. They propose to fight against the labor-saving devices imposed by law to save miners' lives. They mean to continue overcharging for powder, and to force the men to give three thousand pounds of coal for a ton.

There is no question that the men will be forced into a strike sooner or later.

The fighting of union labor is in the air—and a series of strikes in which the employers have won makes them eager for new victories.

The Beef Trust beat their workmen.

The street cars in New York City were made into "scab" roads with the aid of Murphy and Mayor McClellan, backing up their owner, Belmont.

The employers begin to think that there is not much fight left in the union workman, and they mean to go at him on all sides.

The big strike will have to come, and, as we have said, the owners of the mines and the railroads are READY.

They have piled up many millions of tons of coal—near the railroad tracks and near the big cities. They have been getting their labor cheap enough, and they have been running on full time—getting lots of coal ahead to be ready for the strike.

Of course it cost money to pile up the millions of surplus tons—and of course they have lost "interest" on that money.

But that does not worry them. The PUBLIC WILL PAY BACK THAT INTEREST THREE TIMES AND TEN TIMES OVER WHEN THE STRIKE COMES.

The labor in a ton of coal represents very little money. That sum ten times over will be added to the consumer's bill when the "high prices" are quoted.

The coal strike will be the EXCUSE for high prices.

While the public pays a big price and the miners' families go hungry the mine owners will evict the families of miners from their shanties, rake in the strike profits, and laugh.

It will not be a pleasant experience or an easy fight for the workmen. If they win, it will be after a bitter and violent struggle. The coal is there piled up in mountains all ready for the strike. What can the men do to win?

It is even likely—if they fail to strike of their own accord—that they will be pushed into rebellion by a halfway lockout. The owners want revenge for the last strike, and they want to "teach their men a lesson."

It will be a hard lesson. But it will not be wasted. And when it is LEARNED, let the mine-owners look out. It will be their turn to learn something.

The lesson that the miners must learn is this:

THEY CANNOT FIGHT THEIR EMPLOYERS EXCEPT WITH THE BALLOT.

While they let the mine-owners own railroads, and legislatures, and make laws, their strikes can do nothing permanent. The trusts are organized for POLITICAL ACTION. Everybody knows that.

The MEN must be organized for political action, or they must remain in hopeless uncertainty, on small pay, varied by painful strikes.

The workers of New Zealand learned the lesson. They went OUT OF STRIKES AND INTO POLITICS. They did not listen to the selfish arguments of "leaders" eager to keep their pull and their importance.

THEY WENT OUT OF STRIKES AND INTO POLITICS.

They made national necessities NATIONAL PROPERTY.

THEY GOT CONTROL OF THE GOVERNMENT AND THEY HAVE CONTROL OF IT AT THIS MOMENT.

That is what the workers of America have got to do. That is the lesson that—fortunately—the dense mine-owners will force upon them.

Women Can Be Cured THROUGH VANITY

Other Cures Are Doubtful. This Cure Is for Cigarette Smoking

It is an unpleasant fact that cigarette smoking by women is increasing rapidly—here and abroad.

Decent restaurants in America still refuse to allow women to degrade themselves by smoking in public. In Europe, on the contrary, women smoke everywhere—and of the rich, idle, fashionable and vicious women so much copied by their betters, it may safely be said that a majority are cigarette smokers now.

Of course women who smoke do not mean to do harm, to set a bad example, or to injure the human race. But they DO all three.

Humanity has had a chance because women have kept free from alcohol, tobacco and men's vices generally. The new child got from its mother at least HALF a chance.

Tobacco smoke means for women weaker nerves, inability to resist disease, a distorted view of life—due to a weakened mind that does not at all NEED weakening.

But it is hardly worth while to talk to women against cigarette smoking on RATIONAL lines. See how much earnest talk has been wasted on tight corsets—and woman's only thought is how to get them queerer and tighter.

Labouchere—who runs a newspaper in England—has brains. He has started in the right way to cure women of cigarette smoking—and with great pleasure we spread the good news that scientists have helped him to unearth.

Labouchere wastes no time on moralizing, or on appeals to sentimentality.

He prints facts that prove the effect of cigarette smoke on woman's LOOKS.

Cigarettes make a woman's mustache grow—to begin with. If a woman keeps at it long enough, the smoking of cigarettes will give her just about the kind of mustache worn by the sickly, feeble man cigarette smoker.

Women, if you do not want to grow mustaches—LEAVE CIGARETTES ALONE.

And Labouchere shows also—quoting authorities and statistics—that smoking cigarettes MAKES WOMEN'S EYELIDS RED.

The curling smoke is in itself a poison—irritating to the delicate membrane that lines the eyelids, and causing chronic inflammation.

Women, IF YOU DON'T WANT RED EYELIDS, leave cigarettes alone.

What a blessing it would be if science could truthfully push in other directions Labouchere's excellent cure for cigarette smoking. Women can be reached through their kind hearts, or their charming, childish vanity.

Women will cheerfully give up anything to help a mosshee—especially a child.

And she will give up anything to keep the tip of her nose from getting red. Millions of women have left out their stays when the nose tip began to get scarlet—and they wouldn't do that to save their livers, or lungs, or to cheat an early grave.

To keep a skinny figure, which is not pretty or useful, woman will starve cheerfully, drink vinegar and give up the strengthening food that she needs and that nature wants her to have.

If tight corsets caused freckles, high heels a red nose, and cigarettes made all the hair fall out—what an improvement among modern foolish women!

Meanwhile—foolish, women—remember that smoking cigarettes DOES make hair grow on your face, and that it DOES give you red eyelids.

Let this warning save you from the foolish vice of cigarette smoking, or better still, leave the cigarettes alone because you have self-respect and mean to put before other young girls as good an example as your own mothers put before you.

Why Women Are Deceivers

By Beatrice Fairfax

MAN proclaims himself a lover of truth, and to a certain extent I suppose he is.

He is always asserting that he despises the petty untruths to which women descend.

He will declare with great gusto that he hates a lie.

And yet he, the hater of lies and the scorner of sham, is the one who drives woman to nine-tenths of her deceptions.

Even as a tiny tot she learns that to please the lords of creation she must make herself as pretty as possible.

If nature has not endowed her with beauty then she must do her best to make up for the deficiency.

From her infancy she is taught to be more or less of a sham.

And all because of her desire to find favor in the eyes of man.

Any falsifying that adds to her personal appearance is considered justifiable.

The woman who bleaches her hair and paints her face does so because she thinks men will admire her.

The married woman is obliged to smooth over certain facts and indulge in more or less mild deception to keep her lord and master in genial mood.

If she gives him undiluted truth he grumbles and if he detects her in deception he denounces her. She is between two fires.

If she would be popular socially she must descend to numerous small deceptions.

A man can tell the plain, unvarnished truth and no one will accuse him of lack of tact, but a woman must gloss over all unpleasant facts if she would escape being spoken of as "tactless."

She may not have any special fondness for children, but she must pretend to adore them or men will think her unfeminine.

She must pretend to be pleased when she is inwardly raging.

Poor woman, her life is one long "pretend."

But as all the pretending is done with the desire to please it is not a very discreditable proceeding.

A man will say to a woman, "Why do you get yourself up in this way; why don't you leave yourself as nature made you?"

But, all the same, if, perchance, nature has cast her in a plain mould, she had better beautify herself as best she can or men will leave her severely alone.

So, you see, after all, man is to blame for nearly all deception on the part of woman.

If a woman does not resort to these little artifices to make herself beautiful in the eyes of man he will speak of her as a woman of sterling worth and common sense—and leave her alone.

But as long as man continues to be a beauty worshipper woman will continue to leave no stone unturned to make herself beautiful.

Man admires truth, and yet he demands in woman certain qualities which frequently prevent her from being entirely truthful.

Clean Government Insurance at Cost

By Prof. Frank Parsons, Ph. D.

THE volcanic eruptions now going on in the insurance world are calculated to set people thinking about the best way to eliminate such explosives as graft, extravagance and unearned increment from the insurance business.

It seems that the managers of insurance companies use the premium funds

To pay extravagant salaries to themselves and their friends.

To pay large commissions to a host of needless agents.

To provide big dinners and other entertainments for their acquaintances in the "smart set."

To make contributions to campaign funds, etc., etc.

When Republican managers give $100,000 at different times to help elect McKinley and $50,000 to the Roosevelt campaign, the Democratic policy holders have the satisfaction of knowing that their money is being devoted to the defeat of their candidates.

And Republican policy holders would have the same medicine to take if the managers were Democratic in their proclivities.

The managers are not thinking of the policy holders, but of themselves.

They are not trying to see how cheap and safe they can make the policies—how low they can make the cost, and how near to the cost they can bring the premiums—not at all.

They are trying to see how much they can get out of the public for themselves.

There is one country, New Zealand, the most democratic and progressive country in the world, that has established a better system—a cheaper, safer, more liberal system of insurance, absolutely free from graft, extravagance and perversion of funds.

New Zealand is an English colony full of intelligent Anglo-Saxons, the Yankees of the South Pacific, who are as inventive in respect to helpful institutions as we are in respect to helpful mechanical devices.

These Yankees regard their Government as a big co-operative firm, which is to attend to various business interests of the people, who are the partners or members of the firm.

One of the business interests they have entrusted to their big firm, or government, is insurance, life insurance, fire insurance and accident insurance.

The government insurance department does not pay big salaries, nor give dinners, nor contribute to campaign funds.

It does not even aim at profit.

But regarding itself as a trustee for the policy holders, and aims to reduce expenses to the lowest possible limit. The premiums are made very low and if there is any profit it is given back to the policy holders.

The result is that the people get insurance at cost, and under an absolute guarantee against loss.

The philosophy of the new departure is very simple. The purpose of insurance is the diffusion of loss. Instead of allowing a loss to fall with crushing weight on one individual or family, it is spread out over a large number of stockholders and premium payers.

If it is a good thing to distribute loss over a few thousand people who hold stock in a given company or pay premiums to it, it is still better to distribute the loss over the whole community.

It is also wise to eliminate the expenses and profits of insurance so far as may be, and put the guaranty of the Government behind it, so that it may reach as many people and afford as much security as possible.

In competition with English and American companies the Government Insurance Department has won out. The people prefer the government insurance:

(1.) Because of its safety—it has the Government and all the resources of the nation behind it. It is no danger of vanishing through insolvency, as ordinary insurance does now and then.

(2.) Because of its cheapness. The rates are lower than in private companies.

(3.) Because of its freedom from all oppressive conditions, and, in fact, from practically all conditions of any sort. A prospectus of the department says:

"The Government Insurance Department's policy is practically free from conditions of any kind, except the payment of premiums as they fall due. The desire of the department is to grant everyone the freest form of policy compatible with sound and prudent management. Improvements have been adopted from time to time as they have been found to be safe, with the result that the policy contract is now practically free from all restrictions, with the single exception framed in the interest of public policy, that the commissioner may declare the contract void if the assured commits suicide within six months of date of entry."

The premiums must be paid and the assured must not commit suicide within six months after the insurance is taken out—that's all. The policy is world-wide. The assured may go where he will and do what he likes—get himself shot in battle, smoke cigarettes, drink to excess and eat mince pie, or commit suicide in the ordinary form after six months, and the money will still be paid.

(4.) Because of the Government's liberality in saving people from forfeitures. The condition as to payment of premiums and the cash-loan arrangement is offered in this way. If a man fails to pay the department his premium when it is due, he does not lose his insurance. The Government pays the premium out of the surrender value of the policy and continues the insurance in force, and will do this over and over again, as long as there is any surrender value left.

(5.) Because it is co-operative. The profits of the business go to the insured. They are divided triennially. Five dividends of profits have been made, the total returned to policy holders being about $35,000,000, which in the case of a private stock company would have gone to the making of millionaires.

(6.) Instead of burning its funds over to banks the Government insurance office lends its money direct to policy holders on real estate, municipal bonds or other securities.

In any country where this system was fully carried out so that all insurance became public and none of it remained on a private profit basis, it would be impossible to do away with practically the whole army of competing insurance agents. The postoffices could do the whole work of the agencies.

In a community where all the people were reasonably civilized and trustworthy universal insurance could be adopted and very low premiums, collected with the taxes, would give everyone the benefits of life, endowment, fire and accident insurance.

Do you really think our expensive, cheating, insecure, graft-tainted, profit-seeking system is the best we can do?
